Meet your newspaper staff

The Salado Village Voice newspaper has seen more than three decades of service to the Village of Salado.

During that time, the newspaper has always been a family affair, since its founding by Dayton Kelly in 1979. After Dayton's death, his sons Dennis and Bill operated the newspaper until the Fleischer family purchased the newspaper in 1988.

As we begin 2014, Salado Village Voice staffers would like to reintroduce themselves to the community they serve.

Salado Village Voice has a staff of four, including publishers Tim and Marilyn Fleischer. Other staffers are Stephanie Hood, advertising composition and Royce Wiggin, office assistant.

In addition to individual awards by staff members, Salado Village Voice has been honored by the community and state. The newspaper was the firstever Business of the Year, awarded in January 2003 by the Salado Chamber of Commerce. The newspaper has also been named multiple times to the Texas Association of School Board's Media Honor Roll for news coverage of the Salado school district, including each of the last three years.

The newspaper qualified for the Periodicals rating from the US Post Office in 2009 and joined the Texas Press Association in 2010.

Tim Fleischer

Tim Fleischer has been a newspaperman since he was 16, working for both weeklies and daily newspapers. "I got the Devil's Ink at an early age and haven't been able to get rid of it," he said of his 30 years in the newspaper industry.

For more than 25 years of it, he has been the editor of the Salado Village Voice

But his love for Salado has been for more than three decades. "I came to Salado for the Art Fair and Gathering of the Clans with my parents when I was growing up in Coryell County," he said. "I drove through it every day on my way to run a small newspaper in Florence."

Tim and Marilyn Fleischer have published the newspaper since 1988. During that time, the newspaper has grown from an eight-page tabloid to a full-size broadsheet newspaper with four sections.

"We have grown with the community and are a reflection of it," he said.

In those years, the newspaper has won several awards from the Texas Community Newspaper Association, where Salado Village Voice competed against newspapers from San Antonio, Dallas, Houston, Austin and around the state.

Tim has won several TCNA awards: advertising design (third in state for large ad format and third in state for advertising series); editorial work (first in state for editorial writing, third in state for editorial writing, third in state for column writing) and second in state for community service (for articles during the incorporation election).

Fleischer has been named to the Texas Association of School Boards Media Honor Roll several times during his tenure at the helm of the newspaper, including the 2012 Honor Roll. Media are recommended and nominated for the Honor Roll by local school boards for their coverage of schools.

He has also served the community in a variety of capacities, including four years on the board of directors of the Salado Chamber of Commerce and six years on the board of directors of the Institute for Humanities at Salado. He was president of the Salado Chamber of Commerce and treasurer for two years of the Institute for Humanities.

Fleischer was recently elected to a third term the Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors.

He just completed a term on the inaugural board of the Salado Community Foundation. He was also on the first board that established the Mentoring program in Salado. He is a mentor to a Salado Intermediate student.

Tim is also a Mason and twice Past Master of the Salado Masonic Lodge #296. He served as District Deputy Grand Master for Masonic District #48 in 2011-12.

Tim is also active in the Salado Rotary Club.

He and wife Marilyn share responsibilities at the newspaper. "She runs the office and I make editorial decisions," he said.

Marilyn Fleischer
Marilyn got the Devil's Ink in her blood after meeting Tim 27 years ago. She worked in the corporate world prior to the purchase of the Salado Village Voice in 1988.

She also owned and operated a plant business in the Killeen/Copperas Cove area for several years while raising her three children.

During their years in Salado, Marilyn has served the community in many ways. "I think I have been most satisfied with my work with the Salado Family Relief Fund," she said. In addition to her work to establish the Family Relief Fund, Marilyn has also been Art Fair chairperson for two years. and served three years as a Chamber of Commerce Director. She served two three-year terms on the Salado Civic Center board of directors.

She was recently elected to a three-year term on the Salado Community Foundation.

She has also won awards from the TCNA. She has twice been honored. She won second place for Best Feature Photo and second place for Community Service for her work with the Family Relief Fund.

The Fleischers helped to establish what became known as the Public Arts League of Salado.

The Fleischers' children -- Royce Wiggin and Jenny Potter, are both graduates of Salado High School -- have grown up in the eye of the community. Royce graduated in 2007, beginning in second grade in Salado schools. Jenny began her school career as a kindergärtner at Thomas Arnold Elementary School and graduated in 2009.

The newest addition is Nate Timothy Potter, who was born to Jenny and Joey Potter on Dec. 13, 2011.

Royce Wiggin

Royce Wiggin is one of those rare species: a native of Salado, born here in 1989.

He has attended school in Salado since second grade graduating in 2007. While in high school, he was a trumpet player in the Salado Eagle Marching Band and a tennis player.

He began work at the newspaper over the summer of his junior year in high school. His responsibilities include placing and rotating ads on pages, directing phone calls in the office, proof reading, typesetting and a myriad of other duties.

He is the son of Tim and Marilyn Fleischer, owners of the newspaper, and is glad to finally get paid for all the hours he spends at the newspaper office.

He is attending college at Temple College, while working full time at the newspaper. Stephanie Hood Another native of Salado is Stephanie Hood, a 1987 graduate of Salado High School, Stephanie is a hometown girl at heart and a third generation graduate who is raising a fourth generation of eagles.

"I am a country kid, I was 'raised here' as they say. The history of Salado and Bell county is intertwined with the history of my family. With that comes a certain respect for the old buildings, farms and the old timers who made Salado great."

"The creek was the favorite swimming hole when I was a kid and not just for Salado," she said. "The tree lined banks were the perfect place to find a cool retreat from the sun. You had to be a good kid though, if you acted up your parents would get a phone call before you even thought about going home."

Stephanie joined the newspaper in 2006 as the composition person.

She has spent her career creating images that express ideas. As a Broadcasting major in college, she worked for both KNCT and KCTF television stations before becoming a videographer for Scott & White See Newspaper Staff, Page 4A

PALS brings art to village, Taste of Salado set Feb. 22

Few small towns can boast the array of arts that Salado has. In recent months, works of art have been placed on Main Street by the Public Arts League of Salado (PALS). Two of these can be found at the corner of Main Street and Thomas Arnold. Many other sculptures can be found throughout town and in the Salado Sculpture Garden.

These projects would not come to fruition without the Public Arts League of Salado, which will be holding one of its periodic fundraisers next month.

The Taste of Salado will bring together culinary and visual arts at Jack's Barn 6-9 p.m. Feb. 22. The Taste of Salado combines the flavors and Salado's restaurants, bed and breakfasts and shops with live and silent auctions featuring the work of more than a dozen local artists.

Tickets are $25 per person and can be purchased at www.saladoevents.com. Reservations are recommended for this event.

The Taste of Salado will feature food and drink from the following Salado businesses: The Inn on the Creek, The Stagecoach Inn, The Range at the Barton House, Cathy's Boardwalk Cafe, Salado Patio, Johnny's Steaks and Bar-Be-Que, Ambrosia's Tea Room, Cowboys BBQ, McCain's Bakery and Cafe, Salado Pizza Place, Silvia's Taco Wagon, Red Barn Hideaway, Stone Creek Settlement, Weatherstone B&B, The Baines House B&B, Robertson's Hams, Salado Winery, Salado Wine Seller, Brookshire Brothers, Charlotte's of Salado, Salado Mercantile, Strawberry Patch and Salado Vintage Cakery.

Several Salado artists have donated artwork for the Live and Silent Auction, including these: Shelby Haggerton, Ronnie Wells, Lonnie Edwards, Gail Allard, Aaron Gist, Jessica Flynn, Ben Casey, Nancy Messenger, Helen Alexander, Melissa Paxton, Jill and Johnny Shipman, Larry Prellop, B. Herd and Michael Pritchett. Solana Ranch has given a dove hunt, Ben Casey has given lessons in glassblowing and Don Casey, a Morrocan lantern for the auction that evening.

Sculptor Joe Barrington placed his steel sculpture "Self Made Man" in front of First State Bank recently, as part of the Public Arts League of Salado's Art on Main St. program. The sculpture is a self-portrait, Barrington says. More of his work can be seen in the Salado Sculpture Garden. PALS is funded by donations and periodic fund-raisers including the upcoming Taste of Salado. (Photo By Royce Wiggin)

Pajama Boy: Peter Pan in Obamacare Land

Pajama Boy's place in Internet infamy was secured as soon as the insufferable man-child was tweeted out by Organizing for America.

He is the face of a Web ad that is the latest effort by the Obama team to leverage the holidays for conversation about Obamacare. "Wear pajamas," the ad reads. "Drink hot chocolate. Talk about getting health insurance. #GetTalking."

And, sure enough, Pajama Boy is wearing pajamas -- a zip-up onesie in classic Lamar Alexander plaid -- and drinking hot chocolate. He is in his 20s, sporting hipster glasses he could have bought at Warby Parker and an expression of self-satisfied ironic amusement.

Pajama Boy is about as threatening as Michael Cera and so nerdy he could guest-host on an unwatched MSNBC show. He is probably reading "The Bell Jar" and looking forward to a hearty Christmas meal of stuffed tofurkey. If he has anything to say about it, Obamacare enrollments will spike in the next few weeks in Williamsburg and Ann Arbor. Perhaps the goal of OFA was to create a readily mockable image to draw attention to its message, in which case Pajama Boy was a brilliantly successful troll. The right immediately Photoshopped him into the Mandela funeral selfie and emblazoned his photo with derisive lines like "Hey girl, I live with my parents" and "How did you know I went to Oberlin?"

But it's hard not to see Pajama Boy as an expression of the Obama vision, just like his forbear Julia, the Internet cartoon from the 2012 campaign. Pajama Boy is Julia's little brother. She progressed through life without any significant family or community connections. He is the picture of perpetual adolescence. Neither is a symbol of self-reliant, responsible adulthood.

Alexis de Tocqueville wrote long ago of the infantilizing tendency of all-encompassing government. "It would be like the authority of a parent," he wrote in a famous passage, "if, like that authority, its object was to prepare men for manhood; but it seeks, on the contrary, to keep them in perpetual childhood." If you wanted to illustrate what Tocqueville was getting at in one meme, Pajama Boy would be good way to do it.

Pajama Boy's mom probably still tucks him in at night, and when she isn't there for him, Obamacare will be. A less nurturing reaction is, as New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie put it in a counter tweet, "Get out of your pajamas." There's a reason President Barack Obama is underwater by a 2-1 margin among men in the latest Quinnipiac poll. For all the ridicule directed at Julia during last year's campaign, she got at something important: Single women do look to government as a cushion against their economic insecurities. Pajama Boy isn't so apt. He might be glad to pay more for his health insurance to include maternity benefits he doesn't need as a blow against gender stereotyping, but most young people will presumably consider Obamacare more rationally and realize it's a scheme to get them to subsidize insurance costs for older people.

Good luck, Pajama Boy, if you hope to talk them out of that.

Geithner Gets a Perch on Wall Street

THE FORMER TREASURY SECRETARY IS PROOF THE WASHINGTON-TO-WALL-STREET REVOLVING DOOR SERVES THE INTERESTS OF BANKERS, NOT THE PUBLIC.

Timmy Geithner has

After President Barack Obama's first-term Treasury Secretary resigned early this year, I lost track of him. But in November, Geithner reappeared, having spun himself through Washington's revolving door – whoosh, whoosh, whoosh – and flung himself all the way up to Wall Street, landing softly in the cushy quarters of Warburg Pincus, one of America's top 10 private-equity

Yes, the guy who was responsible for rescuing and regulating Wall Street's too-big-to-fail, multibillion-dollar, financial casinos is now the president of one.

Writing in The New Yorker magazine, Andrew Huszar says we need not be surprised that the former treasury chief is cashing in on his insider knowledge and contacts. Huszar worked at the Federal Re-

He says that rather than promoting knowledgeable regulators from within the Fed, Geithner broke with tradition (and prudence) to put top bankers from JPMorgan Chase, American Express, Goldman Sachs, and other powerhouse firms in key regulatory positions. In other words, the new honcho built his own revolving door in the New York Fed, bringing in bankers to regulate them-the Treasury Department, Huszar was again unsurprised that our nation's overseer of banksters quickly proved to be their comforter and protector.

Thus, when Obama promoted Geithner to head

"Geithner never publicly advocated for the truly forceful and clean revamp of Wall Street," writes Huszar. Instead, he used his influence to convince "Obama and other lawmakers to be more accommodating to the big banks."

Whether spinning from the inside out, or from the outside in, Geithner is proof the Washington-to-Wall-Street revolving door serves bankers, not the public interests. We need to weld that door shut.

The danger of incivility

Think it's too late for a Christmas gift idea? Not for the one I have in mind. It's something you can give right now to anyone you like. Something that's sorely needed in policy circles and political debates: civility.

Alas, what we're seeing in the marketplace of ideas today is a disturbing growth of incivility. This breakdown isn't a failing of either the political left or right exclusively. It spreads from one end of the spectrum to the other.

This schoolyard mentality, and the name-calling that inevitably follows, are not the exclusive domain of those who attach intemperate comments to online articles. We hear it from highly educated people who write syndicated columns, publish books, and shout on radio and television talk shows.

Further down the food chain, lesser lights join in, poisoning the atmosphere still more. The Internet is a breeding ground for this type of behavior.

Someone will post a civil comment on some political topic. Almost immediately, someone else swings the verbal hammer of incivility, and from there the conversation degrades into a food fight. with invective and insult as the main course.

This breakdown is an echo of the famous "broken windows" theory of crime, popularized years ago by criminologists James Q. Wilson and George Kelling: When a broken window in a building is left un-repaired, the rest are soon broken by

Heritage Forum

By Edwin Feulner

That's what we see online and on the airwaves. Once someone lowers the tone, others take it as an invitation to join in. Debates become shouting matches.

If you watch closely, you'll see something else happening. The people who make civil comments basically shut down. A few join in the food fight. But most just disappear. They leave because the atmosphere has turned hostile to anything approaching an actual dialogue.

This is the real danger of incivility. Our free, selfgoverning society requires an open exchange of ideas. That can't happen without a certain level of mutual respect for each other's opinions and viewpoints.

What we see today is an accelerating competition between the left and the right to see which side can inflict the most damage. Increasingly, those who take part in public debates appear to be exchanging ideas when, in fact, they are trading insults: idiot, liar, moron, traitor.

The broken-windows theory shows us the dangers when it comes to both crime and debates. But there's an important difference.

When behavioral norms break down in a community, police can restore order. But when civility breaks down in the marketplace of ideas, the law is powerless to set things right.

And properly so. Our right to speak freely is guaranteed by those five glorious words in the First Amendment: "Congress shall make no law"

And yet, the need for civility has never been greater. Our nation is divided as never before between the left and the right. We are at loggerheads on profoundly important political and social questions. Civilization itself is under barbaric attack from without.

Sadly, too many us are not rising to these challenges as a democratic people. Rather than helping to reverse this decline, the rising chorus of incivility is driving out citizens of honest intent and encouraging those who trade in jeering and mock-

If we are to prevail as a free, self-governing people, we must first govern our tongues and our pens. Restoring civility to public discourse is not an option. It is a necessity.

Who will begin the restoration of civility? It falls to all of us to help revive this important virtue.

There's a world of difference between attacking a person's argument and attacking a person's character. We need to do more to respect that difference. To engage in rational debate and either hold our own or lose with grace.

We must defend our convictions with all the spirit we can. But we should do it with all the civility we can muster, no matter what our opponents do or sav.

May that be our gift to one another, this year and every year.

This low-carb diet is good for you and the planet

By JILL RICHARDSON

2014. A new year. The time to make resolutions. It's when we all join gyms, sign up for dating sites, and start new diets — only to quit them a few weeks later.

If you're into resolutions, I've got one for you to consider: In 2014, try a low-carb diet. Not a lowcarb(ohydrate) diet, but a low-carbon one. As in carbon dioxide, the main greenhouse gas causing the climate crisis.

If you think it sounds a bit strange, hear me out.

Humans produce greenhouse gases several ways. The most obvious one is burning fossil fuels. Heat, air conditioning, transportation, and electricity all fall into this category.

And I'll be honest. I'd love to reduce the amount of fossil fuels I use. But I have very little ability to make my city improve its public transportation, walkability, and bike paths. Some people can

H1N1 flu activity is on rise across Texas this winter

By John Michaelson TEXAS NEWS SERVICE

AUSTIN: With flu activity on the rise across the state, doctors are urging Texans to protect themselves by getting vaccinated.

Chris Van Deusen, press officer for the Texas Department of State Health Services, says the primary strain doctors are seeing now is the H1N1, which emerged in 2009 and hit adults and schoolaged children especially hard.

"Pretty much all regions of the state are seeing elevated flu right now and so, we want to remind people that it's an issue,"

he says. "It is flu season for sure, so if they haven't already, people should take time to get a flu shot to help protect themselves and their families."

The H1N1 strain is among those covered with this year's flu vaccine.

It is recommended for everyone ages six months and older and doctors say it's especially important for those who have regular contact with high-risk populations.

That includes pregnant women, people with chronic health problems, young children and the elderly.

In addition to getting a shot, Van Deusen says some basic hygiene can

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), influenza kills nearly 25,000 Americans each year.

Lifelong struggles facing Texas foster kids who age out of system

By John Michaelson TEXAS NEWS SERVICE

AUSTIN: Hundreds of Texas children got their Christmas wish: finding a forever home. However, for thousands more in foster care, especially those who are older, the wait continues.

Ashley Harris, child welfare policy associate, Texans Care for Children, said teens are the hardest to place, and they're more apt to face negative life events.

"Only about half of foster youth graduate from high school. Thirty percent of homeless adults report having been involved in a foster-care system.

And while 70 percent of foster youth say they want to attend college, less than 5 percent actually receive a college degree," Harris

There are a number of efforts to get those kids on a better life track. Harris said they include a voluntary program where youngsters can stay in the system until they are 21, "just to get their educational needs met and work on some additional independent living skills before they leave the foster care system. Texas also provides college tuition support. Additionally, older youth who age out of the foster system in Texas can receive health insurance

Currently, more than 16,000 children are in state foster care in Texas, and about 2,000 age out of the system every year.

BILLY D. PARKER

Services for Billy D. Parker, of Harker Heights, were held at 2 p.m. December 28, 2013 at First Baptist Church-Trimmier in Killeen. Burial followed at Pleasant Hill Cemetery in Nolanville.

Parker died Dec. 25, 2013, from complications of a stroke suffered Dec. 17. He was born March 29, 1936, in Bell County to Dee Davis and Clara Parker. He was a lifelong resident of Bell County.

He graduated from Salado High School in 1953, and moved to Killeen in 1956. He worked for William Cameron Lumber Company, Killeen Lumber and Killeen Savings and Loan, where he served in various positions, including president, until 1975. He made a move to fulltime real estate broker (Parker & Sutton Real Estate) and appraiser in 1976. He actively appraised properties in the Fort Hood area since 1959, and was involved in the development of several residential subdivisions including Sutton Place in Harker Heights.

Parker was actively involved during the 1960s and '70s in community service, serving in various organizations including president of the Killeen Exchange Club from 1962 to 1963, Greater Killeen Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors. American Cancer Society, Homebuilders of Central Texas, president of Killeen Quarterback Club and was honored as ABWA Globe Chapter Boss of the Year.

KNCT Wine Classic to be held Jan. 18

The sixth annual KNCT Wine Classic will be held Jan. 18 at the Killeen Civic and Conference Center. Hosted by public radio/television station KNCT, the fundraiser event features a Wine 101 class, wine sampling, food and a silent auction.

The evening starts at 5 p.m. with the Wine 101 class led by Steve Hanik, certified sommelier. This jump-start course will teach participants what to look for in a glass of wine and how to describe it. The class teaches novices how to select the right wine for each meal, what to look for in taste and scent in selecting wines and other aspects of the wine-making process. It is the perfect for those wanting to learning about wine, planning a trip to wine country or going to attend a wine dinner. Advance tickets for the class are $100 ($110 at the door) and include early entry into the wine tasting event. Those interested in the wine class should consider purchasing tickets early as limited seating is available.

The wine tasting will be from 7 – 10 p.m. Guests can sample an array of domestic and imported wines from a complimentary Wine Classic wine glass and enjoy a delectable assortment of appetizers. Advance tickets for only the tasting portion of the evening are $60 ($70 at the door). A silent auction for various high-end wines and other items including art, a wine refrigerator, jewelry, wine baskets and much more will be held during the evening.

Tickets for the KNCT Wine Classic are available by calling 877-533-5628 or online at www.knct.org. Participants must be 21 years of age or older. Proceeds from the event benefit the local public television and radio stations KNCT-TV and "Simply Beautiful" 91.3 KNCT-FM. More information about the KNCT Wine Classic is available at the KNCT website.

greenhouse gas emissions come from agriculture. Including the impacts of deforestation due to agriculture, getting our food from farm to table accounts for more than 27 percent of global emissions.

The good news: Changing your diet is affordable — even delicious. We all eat three times a day, after all. And a low-carbon diet is actually healthier and often cheaper than what most Americans eat already.

How do you do it? The short answer is "eat less meat." But please keep reading before you dismiss this as a vegetarian rant.

It takes 40 calories of energy to produce just one calorie of beef, with a similarly lousy ratio for eggs, and an even worse one for lamb. It takes 14 calories to produce one calorie of either milk or pork, and four calories to produce one calorie of chicken.

That's because we grow enough grain to feed 800 million people, and we feed it all to livestock. Those animals do produce meat, milk and eggs, but they also burn a lot those calories off as they grow.

The amount of calories fed to livestock is far greater than the calories humans obtain from their meat, milk, and eggs. It's far more efficient for humans to eat plant foods ourselves.

There are also other paths to a lower carbon diet. Choosing locally grown foods, buying organic, gardening, and avoiding processed foods all help. But the simplest, most reliable, and most impactful way to shrink your footprint is by eating lower on the food chain.

This isn't news. Scientific American wrote about it in 2011, and the United Nations Food and Agriculture reported on it in 2006. Anna Lappe published a book on climate and diet called Diet for a Hot Planet in 2010.

If you aren't ready to go veg, don't worry. Baby steps are better than nothing. That's the idea behind the Meatless Monday campaign. Just avoid meat one day a week. Eat some vegetarian chili or lasagna. Dip veggies in hummus for a snack. Have a bean burrito or munch on fresh fruit.

Personally, I think reducing your animal product intake is easiest if you crowd out meat, milk, and eggs with plant-based food that you enjoy. If you're busy stuffing your face with crisp apples or roasted butternut squash, you'll be too full to feel deprived.

Best of all, you'll help your health as well as the planet. As it turns out, vegetarians and near-vegetarians are 24 percent less likely to die of heart disease than meat eaters. That means a resolution to reduce your meat consumption will help ensure that you'll be around to enjoy many more New Years to come.

Selections from historic Robertson Plantation will be displayed at Salado's Treasures of Texas Past Antique Show Feb. 22-23

A special selection of antiques from the E.S.C. Robertson Plantation will be part of the Treasures of Texas Past Antique Show Feb. 22-23 in the old Guest and Sanford Granary building (which once housed the Salado Silver Spur Theatre) at 108 Royal St. in Salado.

"This will provide an opportunity for people that would like to own a piece of history to purchase furniture, china, crystal and other items that were part of the Plantation's history," said Judy Fields, one of the event organizers.

Col. E.S.C. Robertson gave the land for Salado College and the original town lots that were sold to raise funds for the erection of the College in 1860. In 1856. Col. Robertson began work on the 22-room Palladian-style mansion that has remained in the family for more than six generations.

Over the decades, each generation of Robertson descendents have added their own pieces and touches to the home, resulting in an unsurpassed collection of antique furniture and decor. For the first time, many of those pieces will be on display and available for sale at the Treasures of Texas Antique Show.

The Antique Show will also feature antiques and collectibles on display and for sale by dealers from around the state.

Admission to the Treasures of Texas Antique Show is $2 per person. The show will be open 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Feb. 22 and noon-4 p.m. Feb. 23. Refreshments will be available in the foyer, provided by the Salado Chamber of Commerce Ladies Auxiliary.

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Salado Chamber of Commerce is a non-profit organization.

Pieces from the Robertson Plantation collection of antiques will be on display and for sale during the Treasures of Texas Past Antique Show Feb. 22-23 in Salado.

Where there's life, there's hope Contract

Bridge By Steve Becker

Assume you're in four spades and West leads a low heart. East collects two heart tricks and shifts to the jack of diamonds. How would you play the hand?

The outlook is not good. It seems certain that you'll lose a diamond and a club and go down one. Of course, you might get lucky and catch the doubleton Q-J of clubs, but the 7 percent chance of this occurring doesn't cheer you up much.

But when you consider the matter further, a brighter prospect emerges. You might be able to make the contract via an elimination play. So you win the diamond return with the king, draw three rounds of trumps and cash the A-K of clubs.

After the trumps and clubs both turn out to be divided 3-2, your chances of making four spades improve significantly. You next cash the ace of diamonds, and then, with fingers crossed, you exit from dummy with a club.

When East wins the trick with the queen, which is what you were hoping for, the contract becomes a virtual certainty. Assuming East started with five hearts for his overcall, he now has nothing but hearts left in his hand. When he returns one, you discard a diamond from one hand and ruff in the other to make four spades.

The hand illustrates how a declarer can sometimes salvage what appears to be a hopeless contract. The key to success in such situations is to try to picture an opposing distribution that would allow you to get home safely. More often than not, your hopes will go unrewarded, but occasionally the outcome will be a happy one.

Dark Factories

Dear EarthTalk: What are "dark factories" and are they good for the environment?

-- Mitchell Pearson, Erie,

So-called dark factories-otherwise known as "lights out" or "automatic" factories-are manufacturing facilities that do not depend on human labor to get work done. While they may have some benefits for the environment they are certainly not beneficial overall considering the impact widespread adoption would have on needed

Without human line workers, such factories can operate without lights, heating and cooling and other "amenities" required by human workers. Of course, very few such facilities are completely automated, as human workers are usually required to set up equipment or remove completed parts. And some run "lightsout" between human labor shifts or as separate shifts to meet increasing demand or save money.

And while the upfront costs of setting up automated work routines manned by robots and other machines may be higher than setting up a traditional factory, ongoing expenses can be significantly less given the lack of human payroll and other human-centric out-

The first dark factories started appearing in Japan in the 1980s as companies there started to take advantage of improvements in the technology of robotics and automation to get around the high costs of human labor. At that time, business analysts predicted then that as technology improved and qualified workers became harder to find and more expensive to support, dark factories would become more prevalent around the world. But in the interim the spread of manufacturing to developing nations with cheap human labor may have temporarily forestalled the rise of dark factories. Also, General Motors' unsuccessful implementation of automated manufacturing in the 1980s—quality declined and sales fell accordingly-soured many big companies on the concept back then.

That said, there are many thriving examples of dark factories around the world. Many machine shops in the U.S. run "unattended" all or part of the time. Robots are commonplace now in the auto industry despite GM's fal-

Recognizing and preventing termite damage

Home ownership can be an unending series of adventures, especially for those homeowners who love good home improvement projects. Some projects are fun and improve the value of a home instantly, while others are undertaken to address a potentially serious issue.

Discovering that termites are taking up residence where you live can be disconcerting, but termites are a very common occurrence. Understanding termites and recognizing the signs of termite damage early on can help homeowners reduce the havoc that such critters can wreak on their homes. Termites are social insects that live together in colonies. These colonies eat nonstop, dining on wood matter. They also eat materials made from plants, like fabric and paper. According to the National Pest Management Association, termites cause more than $5 billion in property damage a year. Studies show that queen termites can live up to decades under ideal climate conditions while workers and soldiers live approximately one to two years.

While there are many varieties of termites, all are silent destroyers capable of chewing undetected through housing structures. To eradicate termites, homeowners must first identify the insects and then contact a termite management specialist to address the pest problem. Spotting termites

Termites may not aland other cellulose plant ways be visible. Subterranean termite homes are usually formed in soil, where the termites build elaborate tunnel systems that channel through to above-ground food sources. Drywood and dampwood termites may live within the wood they consume and be undetectable until the wood collapses or rots away. Homeowners often realize they have a termite problem when they witness swarming termites. At this point there already may be a mature colony at work damaging a home. Swarming, winged termites form in a mature, established colony. Winged termites emerge and fly off looking for mates. Afterward they will locate a new breeding site and form another colony, potentially spreading infestations through multiple locations. Winged termites are attracted to light and can be seen by windows and doors in spring.

Other signs of termites include accumulation of soil or dirt at the base of wood structures or the foundation of a home. There also may be fissures or cracks near wood surfaces. Sometimes "frass" or termite droppings can be seen. They appear as rough, granulated sawdust. Covered mud tubes, or channels of mud leading from the soil up the foundation of a home, are indicative of the presence of termites. Even if termites are no longer present in these tubes, that does not mean the termites have moved on. They simply may have chosen a new path to your home.

Keeping termites away

Once termites have been identified, it is time to eliminate them. This means getting rid of water and food sources that are close to a home.

* Repair leaky faucets and other water drips in and around the house.

* Keep gutters and downspouts clean.

* Seal entry points around water and utility lines or

* Divert water away from the foundation.

* Keep lumber, firewood or paper away from the foundation of the home.

* Clear away stumps and tree debris. * Prevent untreated wood from contacting the soil. Treating termites

It is very difficult for homeowners to get rid of termites by themselves. Very often they require the work of professionals. A termite exterminator will conduct a visual inspection of a home and property and may do extensive testing involving expensive acoustic or infrared equipment to probe the soil beneath the house. Depending on the species of termite, the exterminator will suggest various treatments. These may include the application of pesticides and making areas around the home less hospitable to termites. Severely damaged wood may need to be removed and replaced.

Termites are problematic in many areas of the world. These insects often stay hidden and do serious damage that can cost homeowners a fortune. Treating termites promptly is essential.
