Fourth Infantry Band presents Spring Concert on grounds of Civic Center May 11

Saladoans are cordially invited to attend and enjoy the great music from what many feel is the "finest military band in America" when the Fourth Infantry Division's "Iron Horse" band presents a Spring Concert tomorrow evening, May 11, starting at 7 p.m. at the Civic Center band-stand.

The Civic Center Foundation is sponsoring the event for two "extra special" reasons, according to the Board of Directors of the Foundation - first is to thank Villagers for their continued support of the civic center through participation in the annual fund raising auction and secondly to honor CWO2 Fred Catchings, bandmaster, who will be leading his group in the third major concert to be presented at the Civic Center since Salado and Fort Hood became "Partners" - a successful merging of military peronnel and civilians since 1995.

Fourth Infantry Division Commander, Major Gen-lar director's excellent leadership throughout the area as leader of the "Iron Horse" band.

Catchings will complete his current duties at Fort Hood late this summer and will leave for a new assignment in Europe in the Fall.

Seating will be available for everyone around the bandstand, however in the event of inclement weather, the concert will be moved to the Meadows Audito-

Shelley King

Shelley King has taken Austin by storm in the past few years. That's no easy task in a city overpopulated with great talent. In very short order she has risen fro an unknown, performing weekly gigs at a quaint Congress Street restaurant to sharing the stage with the likes of Joe Ely, The Derailers, BR5-49, Kelly Willis, Jerry Jeff Walker, Lucinda Williams, and Willie Nelson. She and her band have embarked on quite a few tours and have performed at such events as the North By Northeast Music Conference in Toronto, Canada, Riverfest in Little Rock, AR, and a favorite of central Texas, the Old Settler's Music Festival.

King grew up in rural Arkansas singing gospel music in her grandmother's church. Later, after moving to the Houston area, King performed in musical theater with aspirations of Broadway. King sites her guitar playing uncles, Steve and Doug Donoho as musical influences along with grat vocalists like Etta James, Aretha Franklin, Patti LaBelle, and Mavis Staples. Her love of bands like CCR, Fleetwood Mac, and Allman Brothers lead her away from the theater and into the live music venues where she could showcase her own songs and have more creative control.

October 1998, King released her first full length CD, "Call Of My Heart." The CD has been very popular. The title track has been adopted by Austin songstress Toni Price and is now a part of her regular repertoire. King is planning to release her follow-up CD in the late Summer 2000.

King has had her share of awards as well and this year was nominated for two Humbee Awards for Best Performance 1999 and Rising Star 1999. King was also selected as a Finalist in the 1999 Lilith Fair Talent

She is one of the most played independent artists on Austin radio today.

A real gift for single moms

We like to adorn our mothers with flowers and gifts on Mother's Day. It's a great day for florists and candy makers, but for many single mothers, the second Monday of May will be just like any other day: filled with too much work and too little help.

Yet, the Clinton Administration wants to further acerbate the situation for single mothers, many of whom comprise the working poor, by reducing federal funding for child support enforcement by $325 million over the next five years. According to the American Public Human Services Association (APHA), these cuts would jeopardize the progress states have achieved in recent years. The APHA calls for Congress to reject the repeal of "hold harmless" provision within the Fiscal Year 2000 budget proposition.

Before the welfare reform of 1996, past-due child support collected by states could either be sent to the family or used to reimburse states and the federal government for past public assistance payments. Under welfare reform, states must share these collections with families first, which substantially reduces the amount that state and federal governments may

Recognizing this, Congress included a "hold harmless" provision to ensure that if states do not reach their 1995 level of collection, then the federal government would provide funds to make up for state child support funding shortfalls.

Editorial Opinion

Funds from "hold harmless" provisions are used to support the administration of state child support programs and other critical programs for children and families. In our own state, the Attorney General's office has a backlog of more than eight months for child support enforcement cases.

Repealing the "hold harmless" provision would further hurt states' ability to administer their overburdened and underfunded child support enforcement programs. Even though families leave the Temporary Assistance to Needy Families (TANF) rolls, states are still obligated to work their child support cases, but receive no reimbursement for their

While much of the country enjoys this thriving economy, we are leaving behind some of our weakest members: the working poor. To add a $280 million cut in child support enforcement worsens the plight of these single working mothers.

Privatization of Social Security must be isolated from political pressure eorge W. Bush and Al Gore have drawn an uncrossable line in the presidential campaign sand concerning the matter of privatizing the Social Security system.

Bush's idea is to allow each worker in America to invest some of his or her monthly social security "contribution" in a personal stock market account so that over the years the value of the annuitant's portfolio would provide a higher pension than today's relatively meager return after a lifetime of labor.

Gore is unequivocal in his bitter denunciation of the Republican plan, branding the diversion of Social Security taxes into stocks and bonds as "stock market rou-

Like everything else in government and politics, the truth of the matter lies somewhere between the two positions.

Bush refuses to get into the details of his adventure into the stock market - at least until he is elected, but best guess now is that public pressure will force Bush to explain his plan well before November which he should if he wants elective support for a program that is inherently work-

Fact is, the most successful retirement system in America can be found right here in Texas. It handles the business of providing pensions for retired state employees including all elected and appointed of-

A large percentage of the contributions to the Texas retirement system, that includes six percent of each state worker's salary plus a matching six percent from the state, is invested in rock solid and safe securities guaranteed by the government with the balance invested in the stock and bond markets.

Texas State pensions are considered to be the best funded and most secure in the nation thanks to prudent management by officials of the retirement trust fund.

If Texas can do this without scandal or pressure, so can the federal government, provided funds are handled by a group of experienced professionals who are completely divorced from coercion by politicians whose chains are daily jerked by companies making large campaign donations and who will, without doubt, want the billions from social security invested in their

Now that the nominees for president by the two major parties have been named and are at each other's throats, its time to begin the guessing game of who will be tapped for the number two slot on the tickets.

The GOP has the edge in this field with such high dollar names as Colin Powell, John McCain, Pennsylvania Governor Tom Ridge and if a woman is needed - Elizabeth Dole.

Democrats say, and they are probably correct - that a Bush-Powell ticket would be enough to call off the election right now! Even a Bush-McCain duo would be enough of a problem to cause Demos to lose everything in November - White House, Congress and hope!

Gore's list of veep possibles is long but not particularly strong. Headed by Bill Bradley and George Mitchell plus a number of less than stellar lights including Senators Bob Graham (Florida) and Evan Bayh (Indiana) along with Energy Secretary Bill Richardson and California Senator Dianne Feinstein.

A recent NBC-Wall Street Journal poll indicated Bradley is preferred by Gore supporters with Feinstein trailing but still number two!

College Station is that the annual Aggie Bonfire will take place this Fall as a precursor to the Thanksgiving football game between the aggies and longhorns.

COMPUTER NONSENSE

It doesn't take a Harvard grad (or a Bushie Old Eli from Yale) to figure out that something is amiss in the rampaging computer design business. If these guys and gals who earn millions by age 30, can create computers that do everything imaginable for business and government from General Motors to the Pentagon - they can surely figure out a way to protect the internet and personal computers from being hacked, virused or otherwise invaded.

We will just have to raise a concerted howl with Congress and the Nasdaq marauders, forcing them to settle down and design new computers and programs that operate in a safe and privacy protected mode.

Normalizing trade relations with China will increase jobs here in Texas

By Bill Hammond

Texas Chamber of Commerce

Today, Texas has the chance to open a new market for exports. By doing so, we can dramatically increase opportunity and prosperity for Texas workers.

That economic opportunity is China, the most populous country in the world, and the largest untapped market for American goods and services. Today, the Chinese market is effectively closed to America because of crippling tariffs, isolationist regulations aimed specifically at the U.S., and complex bureaucracies that exist solely to restrict our imports.

We not only have a chance to create greater economic opportunity for Texans, but also a chance to teach the people of China the values of democracy and capitalism.

If Congress approves Permanent Normal Trade Relations (PNTR) with China, Texas - and all of the U.S. - will gain economic access to the 1.2 billion-person market there. We have granted normal trade status annually to China every year for two decades, and we maintain a permanent version of this arrangement with all but a handful of countries around the world. China is seeking that permanent status with us as part of their accession to the World Trade Organization (WTO), so they can grow their economy beyond the limits of their social system. And they are willing to make huge concessions to get PNTR.

China's rollback of their protectionist policies will mean dramatically increased sales for our farm products, electronic and other machinery, vehicles and parts, plastics, telecommunications services, investment services and more.

Approval of PNTR incurs no cost whatsoever to either the U.S. government or private business, and it makes no changes to our rules, regulations or laws. China makes all the concessions and the U.S. gets all the benefits. It is one of the greatest bargains in the history of international trade.

PNTR is important for all Texas businesses, but it is especially important for the opportunities it will provide for small businesses, the backbone of both the Texas and U.S. economies. Even with the difficulty of the current trade environment, American small businesses has come to rely on trade with China. In 1997 (the most recent year for which we have statistics), more than 80 percent of all U.S. exporters to China were small businesses. But the dollar value of these exports is small compared to what it could be.

China's concessions will relieve small business of the need for unwieldy, longdistance outsourcing . Firms will be able to distribute Made-in-USA products. Americans will be allowed to own and manage distribution networks. Barriers that limit investment and sales in China will fall. The Chinese government will elmininate import duties on high-tech goods, permit the delivery of satellite telecommunications, allow American investment and joint business ownership, and protect intellectual property rights to proprietary software and high-tech designs. And the end of complex, time-consuming bureaucracies will mean that small businesses can make deals on a timeline that more closely aligns profit with investment.

In addition, we will see the reduction or elimination of farming and manufacturing tariffs, the relaxation of restrictive investment rules, and the acceptance of American wholesaling, retailing, service and support. We will see tariffs on telecommunications equipment go to zero. And an estimated 40 percent of new growth in American farm exports will come from China.

If we fail to approve PNTR, we will lose out on what the World Bank estimates will be $750 billion in spending by China over the next 10 years. That business will end up going to our competitors in Europe and Asia, who will establish advantages in the Chinese market that we may never overcome. This would be a staggering and expensive loss for the nearly 10,000 American firms that already have a foothold in China. So, if Congress rejects PNTR, we won't be punishing China. We'll be punishing working Texas families in the form of lost jobs and lost wages - and for what? History shows that the way to change policies inside oppressed countries such as China is not to cut them off but to engage them in free and fair trade.

It is rare that such a great opportunity comes along that requires so little on our part. But if we want the benefits, we have to work for them now. We must make certain Congress knows that it matters to us here in Texas that we gain access to the greatest economic opportunity in our state's history.

For the sake of Texas jobs, Texas prosperity, and Texas working families, Congress should approve PNTR.

Longer prison terms for gun-related crimes

By Chet Edwards

U.S. Representative

Gun-toting criminals could be looking at long prison terms under a proposed federal law that will help states fight crime and keep streets and neighborhoods safe.

Legislation passed by the House of Representatives in April provides assistance to states that send criminals convicted of a violent gun-related crime to prison for at least five years.

The philosophy is simple and one I support - commit a violent crime with a gun and go to prison for at least five years.

This approach is badly needed to keep criminals behind bars and guarantee that the only time they see a gun is when it is pointed at them from a guard tower.

Texas already has a joint state/federal five year minimum sentencing arrangement in place and is eligible for some of the $100 million that the bill would make available over five years.

States could use the funds to strengthen law enforcement, increase convictions, hire more corrections officers and expand and improve the juvenile justice system.

The bill, which is awaiting action in the U.S. Senate, would require a five-year sentence without parole for a person who uses or carries a firearm during a violent crime - such as murder, rape, robbery, aggravated assault or during a serious drug-trafficing offense.

Criminals armed with guns take a high toll. A comprehensive U.S. Department Of Justice study conducted in 1992 showed that criminals used firearms - with handguns as the weapon of choice - in more than 900,000 crimes. Offenders armed with handguns committed one in every eight of the violent crimes reported. In 1996, firearms were used in 2 out of 3 murders in the U.S.

Central Texas families deserve safe streets and schools free of armed and dangerous criminals.

The approach will make it clear to criminals - use a firearm to commit a crime and automatically win a free five-year prison stay with no questions asked and no excuses accepted.

Sales tax moratorium could hurt Main St.

By Kay Bailey Hutchison

U.S. Senator

Last fall I asked Texans their opinion on whether sales made over the Internet should be taxed the same way goods are taxed in a retail establishment.

The question was: "Items sold over the Internet are not subject to sales tax. That gives the Internet an advantage over regular 'brick-and-mortar' stores. Some think the playing field should be made more even because states depend on tax revenue from store-bought items. If the Internet takes business away from stores, it will shrink state tax revenue. That is a problem for states like Texas that have no state income tax.

"Others believe that subjecting Internet sales to a retail tax should not be allowed. What do you think should be done?"

When we tallied your responses, 56 percent of you were in favor of taxing sales over the Internet, while 43 percent said leave Internet sales untaxed. Here are some of your comments:

From Houston: "It is imperative to our state and local governments that they receive sales tax revenues from all sources of goods sold, including those purchased on the Internet. In fact, taxing all goods equally will keep our sales tax rate low and allow Texans to avoid a state income tax. Texas is in the best position to determine what exemptions should be awarded, and for what time period."

Amarillo: "The Internet and its supporting high technology industries should be allowed to grow unabated by the inhibiting restrictions of taxes. particularly a tax in Internet sales."

Lubbock: "Tax Internet sales, but start slowly and impose this tax incrementally."

Austin: "It is unfair to exempt Internet sales from the sales tax. I think this is a scam to avoid paying local taxes."

Temple: "The Internet industry is developing technology which has the potential to bring great benefits to our nation. A democratic, free-market society needs to be free from as many government restrictions as possible, otherwise we run the risk of suppressing the growth of many of our most vital businesses.'

Abilene: "Not taxing Internet sales is unfair to the hundreds of thousands of retail operations that pay property taxes, employment taxes and yes, sales taxes. The e-commerce retailer immediately has a 6 percent to nine percent (or more) advantage over the local retailer because of not having to pay sales tax. In the competitive retail world, that advantage can be the deciding factor for who makes the sale."

Georgetown: "This industry is growing internationally at such a rapid pace that restrictions such as taxes would severely handicap our country and allow other technologically advanced nations to surpass the United States in these highly competitive markets."

McKinney: "Internet commerce is going to play a significant role in the way business is conducted, but it doesn't need any special consideration such as freedom from taxes."

Amarillo: "If we don't need the funds provided by the sales tax, then why not do away with the sales tax entirely, regardless of where or how the sale is made?" Midland: "Please vote against this. We have enough taxation already."

Like many of our readers, I am concerned that a permanent tax moratorium on Internet purchases would have a negative impact on main street businesses and local governments.

This is particularly true in a state such as Texas, which has no income tax and relies on sales taxes to provide important public services such as law enforcement.

My preference is to not impose a permanent moratorium on taxing Internet transactions and to monitor Internet sales as compared to conventional retail sales. We will want to develop a system that treats all sales the same whether a purchase is made in a store or over the Internet. I am not comfortable with a public policy that favors one type of retailer over another.

Nor do I favor taxes on Internet service itself'.

Electronic commerce is expected to play an ever greater part in the way the United States - and the world conducts business. We must define a public policy that keeps e-commerce vibrant, while not handicapping more traditional retailers.

On behalf of Brenda and myself, we would like to sincerely thank everyone who supported me in my bid for Salado School Board Trustee.

We would also like to congratulate the winners and wish them the best of luck.

Solana honored for conservation

By Tim Fleischer Editor-in-Chief

Texas Soil and Water Conservation Districts Area V honored Solana Ranch with the Wildlife Conservationist Award during an awards banquet in Stephenville May 4.

Area V comprises 51 counties from southern Williamson County to the Oklahoma border and from Abilene to the Tyler area.

There are 33 conservation districts in Area V, including Little River-San Gabriel Soil and Water Conservation District, which nominated Solana Ranch for the award. In 1998, the Solana won the Outstanding Conservationists Award from the Little River-San Gabriel Soil and Water Conservation District.

Several local officials accompanied Solana Ranch owner Kirk Michaux to the banquet. Bell County recently honored Michaux for his conservation efforts on the 8,000-acre ranch southwest of Salado.

Solana Ranch has become known as one of the best archery hunting ranches in the state with hunters visiting the area from around the country.

"Bowhunters take much less than rifle hunters do," Michaux said. "They are the purists."

Solana balances a wildlife hunting operation with a cattle operation, "We have been able to incorporate a cattle operation and wildlife operation," Michaux said, "and have been successful in both. This is a difficult task because of the different types of foods that the animals eat."

But with leadership by manager Jim Lorenz, the Solana has implemented mineral programs, protein programs and food plots for deer, turkey, quail and exotics, in addition to the cowcalf operation of Simbrah and Black Brangus cattle.

The Solana also developed a protein blend to improve the health of deer on the ranch.

"Lorenz is an incredible asset to us," Michaux said of his manager, who has been with the ranch for five years. "Prior to joining us, he was a game warden in this area for 30 years. I don't think there is anyone in this area more familiar with wildlife than Lorenz."

"He helped us to develop feeding plots," Michaux said. "We plant it, fence it and monitor it so that we get the most from the land."

Getting the most from the land means not overusing it, Michaux adds. To do this, Solana rotates its 12 pastures, which range in size from 104 acres to 580 acres. "Rotating the pastures conserves the soil and other resources," Michaux said.

To maintain a successful operation requires three things, Michaux said. "Water, feed and habitat."

The ranch has abundant water with several miles of the Salado Creek, Buttermilk Creek, and both forks of the Rumsey Creek running through it.

By clearing rough land of cedars and planting vegetation for wildlife, the Solana conserves those waters and maintains better habitats for its game.

Which means better game for hunters.

Exotics, such as Black Buck Antelope, Corsican, Hawaiian Black, Mouflon and Texas Dall Rams make for exciting hunts.

"All of our hunters are accompanied on the ranch," Michaux said. "Our guides make a big difference in a successful hunt."

The Solana began its transformation from a cattle operation to a wildlife and cattle operation about five years ago when Michaux took a more active role in the ranch.

Michaux's father, Frank W. Michaux, began acquiring the property along the edge of Edwards Plateau on October 13, 1950.

"He knew the proximity to Austin and a major highway," Michaux said of his father's plans for the ranch. "He knew there was abundant water and good soil, as well as dramatic elevation changes of over 200 feet."

AD, head coach begins settling in to transition of new job in Salado

By Tim Fleischer Editor-in-Chief

For Salado athletic director Jeff Cheatham, saying goodbye to his athletes and students at Irving High School was "one of the toughest things I have had to do as a coach."

Cheatham says that those students had grown to mean a great deal to him during his three years as track coach, varsity offensive coordinator and special teams' coordinator. Last year's team was 9-3 and bidistrict champions, before falling to DeSoto, a top-ten team in the 5A rankings.

As offensive coordinator, Cheatham had Irving High run a pro I formation, taking advantage of a strong line and a great running back. "three of our five linemen will go on to play Division I football," Cheatham said. "We also had one of the best running backs in the country. He (Tyson Thompson) was named the Parade All-American Tailback and broke the single game rushing record with 575 yards."

"We didn't throw much because of that," he added.

Salado threw the ball from a shotgun formation for the past three years with Alan Haire as offensive coordinator. Of future plans for the offense, Cheatham said, "I have a philosophy and system that we will adapt to our kids here."

Cheatham added, "You don't win games with schemes, you win games with kids playing hard and doing it with class."

Jeff Cheatham is settling in to his new job as Athletic Director and Head Football Coach for Salado High School. He says he is excited about the chance to return to a small town.

"You have to have commitment to excellence and to doing things right," he said. "I want to reinforce in our athletes a sense of sportsmanship, a high level of respect for themselves, for the their team and for their community. It is very important that the kids understand that they have a high standard to live by and have to take responsibility for their actions."

This may be some of the reason Cheatham is glad to return to a small community. He graduated from Rogers High School, where he played quarterback for the Eagles there.

After graduating from Rogers and attending Cisco Junior College, Cheatham played football at Sam Houston State University, where he earned a Bachelor of Science in kinesiology with a teaching certificate in biology.

Cheatham served as a graduate assistant on the SHSU coaching staff while he earned a Master of Arts degree in kinesiology.

After coaching at Hull-Daisetta High School near Baytown, Cheatham moved to Irving, where he became the offensive coordinator and special teams' coordi-

Of Salado students, Cheatham said, "We excel in a lot of aspects, not just athletics. The success here is in place and I would like to build on that success."

Part of that success is built on rivalries, like the one between Salado and Rogers, which have not played football against each other in two years. "That's (the rivalries) the part I love," Cheatham said. "It's important to have someone you really want to beat."

Of the rivalry between his Alma Mater and his new home, Cheatham said he knows where his loyalties lay, "I'm red and white now. I'm a Salado Eagle."

Jeff and family

Jeff is married to Shelley Renee, an elementary school teacher. His wife is the daughter of Jerry and Carolyn Roberts, of Salado.

They have two children: Barton, a five-year-old who will enter Kindergarten in Salado next year, and Bethany, a three-year-old.

In addition to settling in as Athletic Director, Jeff and family are looking for a home in the district.

Protect your largest organ - your skin

Our skin is the largest organ in our body and plays a valuable role in our survival. It not only covers the internal organs and protects them from injury and bacteria, our skin regulates our body temperature and helps rid our body of excess water and salts. It also provides for pain, temperature, and touch sensation - all three of which are clearly present after we experience sunburn.

As the summer months draw near, the American Cancer Society is encouraging us to remember the importance of our skin and to protect it from the sun's damaging rays.

"Most of the 1.3 million cases of skin cancer diagnosed yearly in the US are considered to be sunrelated. Those most at risk for skin cancer are people with light skin, fair hair, light color eyes and those who burn However, darker-skinned people can also develop skin cancer, including malignant melanoma, the deadliest form," says Dr. Ramsdell, MD, spokesperson for the American Cancer Society in

To reduce your risk for skin cancer, the American Cancer Society recommends avoiding midday sun between 10 a.m.-4 p.m. when the sun is at its strongest. When outside, protect your skin by wearing protective clothing, including a hat and using a broad-spectrum sunscreen with a skin protective factor (SPF) of 15 or higher that will block both UVA and UVB type rays.

For more information on

UV exposure, skin cancer and ways to protect yourself and your family, visit the American Cancer Society's web site at www.cancer.org. Select skin cancer from the "Types of Cancer" drop down menu and then go to skin cancer prevention.

Or, go directly to www2.cancer.org/skinGuide/index.htm. to access the Society's skin cancer prevention web pages and take the Sun Quiz. From explanations of the UV index to why tanning booths are not safe, the web site provides detailed answers to questions about skin cancer.

For those without Internet access, the American Cancer society is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week through their toll-free information hotline at 1-800-ACS-2345. Cancer Information Specialists are trained to provide the latest information related to skin cancer as well as all forms of cancer

The American Cancer Society is the nationwide, community-based, voluntary health organization dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by preventing cancer, saving lives and diminishing suffering from cancer, through research, education, advocacy, and service.

Skin cancer is the most common of all cancers. One out of every five people in the US will develop skin cancer during their lifetime.

Because we live in a southern state where the sun is stronger, the number of skin cancers diagnosed is higher than in most other states. This year an estimated 3,400 Texans will be diagnosed with the most deadly form of skin cancer-malignant melanoma.

Exposure to UV radiation through sunlight or tanning booths increases the risk of all skin cancers.

Besides skin cancer, the sun's UV radiation also increases the risk of cataracts and certain other eye problems, and can suppress the immune system.

People with a lot of moles or who have moles that are large have an increased risk of malignant melanoma. Risk of malignant melanoma is greater if there is a family history (mother, father, brother, sister, child) of the disease.

People that have been treated with medicines that suppress the immune system may also have an increased risk of melanoma.

Exposure to certain chemicals, such as arsenic and coal tars, or to high dose x-ray treatments have been associated with skin cancers

Sunscreen is necessary even on cloudy days when 70-80 percent of the harmful rays can go through cloud cover.

The sun's rays can burn in up to three feet of water and can reflect off sand, water, concrete and similar surfaces.

Certain medications can make your skin more sensitive to sun damage.

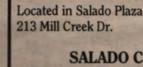

Both basal and squamous cell cancers are typically found on exposed parts of the body such as the face, neck, forearms and scalp. Malignant melanoma, the most deadly form of skin cancer, may be found on skin that is always covered.

Malignant melanoma, like basal cell and squamous cell cancers, is almost always curable in its early stages. Melanoma is much more likely than basal or Continued Page 13A

African-Americans and other dark-skinned people usually get skin cancer on the lighter (less pigmented)

Self-exams of the skin are recommended every

Salado's Coach Smith has had many lives from the Army, to coaching, to business

By Tim Fleischer Editor-in-Chief

Coach Smith has had more lives than a cat. He's loved every one of them.

After a full military career, he went back to school so that he could coach young people.

After a full career of coaching young people, he went into private business for himself.

His travels in the military and in coaching took this Missouri native around the world and across the country.

Coach joined the military in 1939, mostly just to get a job. The Depression had taken its toll on the family business, a large rice farm in Missouri.

"My brother and I joined the Army so that we could have a job," Coach said.

But that job turned into a career for Smith, who retired from the Army as a Major after 221/2 years.

Smith earned many decorations during his years in the military. In addition to serving during World War II, Smith also served during the Korean War.

"I went to Korea three times," Smith says, showing two sabers that were presented to him by the Japanese during his last

His military years included travels to Europe, especially Germany and Belgium.

"My greatest day in the Army was graduating from Ranger school," Smith said, recalling his days as a parachutist and glider pilot.

Smith even worked with atomic warheads in Nevada. "We worked on the Honest John," he said. "We were the first Army unit to fire an atomic warhead from ground to ground." Before that, the atomic weapons had to be delivered by air or sea.

After 221/2 years in the military, Smith retired to pursue his next career.

Before he could do that, though, he had to go back to school. "I was a 42-yearold college freshman," he says with a laugh. But Smith completed his degree from Omaha University and began coaching.

His love of sports was probably spawned earlier in his life, when he competed in Golden Gloves boxing and played on the Army football squad.

Before joining the Army, Smith even tried out for a major league baseball club. He won't tell which one it was.

Rekindling his love of sports, Smith began a 13year stint coaching schools from California to Texas.

His first job as coach was in Slater, in his home state of Missouri.

From there, he traveled halfway across the country to coach at Chadwick, an exclusive private school in

In 1971, Coach landed in Salado, Texas, which had not fielded a football team in over two years.

Smith recalls how he got the job here.

"I decided to leave Chadwick when they got a new headmaster," Smith says. "I had four teenagers

Smith wanted to bring his family to a small town where children learned discipline. "I remembered Ft. Hood from my days in the Army," he said, "and thought I might like to settle in the area."

He called Texas Education Agency (TEA), where he learned of an opening in Salado.

called Superintendent and spoke to him about the job," Smith said. "He told me that I was the kind of man he was looking for and asked me to send in my resume."

Which he did. But when he did not hear from the school, his wife told him to call the superintendent again.

Which he did. "The superintendent said that the board was meeting that night to hire a new coach and asked if I could come in to meet the board," he explains.

"Now, I was in California and the job was in Texas, but I got there," he said with a laugh.

He adds that the board held the position open until 11:30 p.m. when Smith finally pulled in to Salado.

But the saga does not there. superintendent who hired program from the ground up. Competing in six-man football meant traveling long distances to play against other small schools.

Coach remembers some of those players, who now have children of their own in high school or college. Players like Danny Grimm, John Preston, Billy Cottle, Jesse McLaughlin, Jimmy Wilson and others.

Some of those players, as well as other wellwishers will be on hand 6 p.m. May 11 when Salado High School dedicates its gym to Coach Smith for his years of supporting Salado school athletics.

Supporting athletes here in Salado began in 1971 and has continued long after his last days as a coach.

After two years in Salado, Smith coached in Jarrell, Santo and Moran, before returning to Salado to go into business for himself.

"My kids stayed here, so I wanted to come back to Salado," he said of his decision to return.

He bought a service station in 1977 and the Dairy Queen in 1978.

In the 20+ years owning businesses in the area, Coach estimates that he has hired 1,500 teenagers.

For many of them, Coach was their first boss.

For some, he helped them to buy their first car. "I would pay for it and they would pay me back each week from their paychecks," he said. "I never lost a dime on any of our kids here doing that. These are good kids.'

For some of them, he was also the first to give them a pink slip. "I never had to fire a Salado kid for stealing or for doing anything bad," he recalled, "except maybe for not showing up for work."

Coach considers it his duty to help others who are not as fortunate as he is. "This community has been very good to me," Smith says. "The kids here have been great to us. By supporting our schools and kids, it's one way we can give back."

But Smith's generosity does not end with athletes or his young employees. Sometimes he extends a helping hand to complete strangers.

When he does that, he says he has never been disappointed.

He shares one story of a young man traveling through Salado on the Interstate.

"He was on his way from Ohio to apply for a job as manager of a Wal-Mart in Austin," Coach said. "His car broke down on the highway and he and his wife came in to the Dairy Queen."

"I asked what happened and he told me," Coach says, "so I told him to take my car and make that interview on time. His jaw just dropped."

But the young man took the car, returning it to Coach three days later. In the meantime, Coach had the young man's car repaired. "He stopped by about six weeks later to tell me he got the job and was moving to Texas," he said.

"I had no doubts about it," he adds.

Sometimes Coach takes the phrase "he'll give you the shirt off his back" literally. Just ask his buddy Darrell Street.

A few days ago, the two went to a softball game to watch Troy play Lexington (who knocked Salado out of the playoffs).

A norther blew in with heavy winds and light sprinkles. After a while, Coach and Darrell decided that watching Troy and Lexington play was not worth risking a cold. You can bet that if it had been Salado playing, they would have stayed.

On the way out, Coach noticed a young woman who was underdressed for the surprise cold snap.

"So, I gave her my jacket. I told her that she had two little kids and couldn't afford to get sick," he said. "I said if she wanted to return it she could drop it off at the Dairy Queen in

Whether or not she returns that jacket, she will long remember Coach

Flood waters can be deceptive even to the experienced driver

The leading cause of weather-related deaths in Texas is floods and flash floods. Motorists who try to cross flooded low areas and children who walk or play near the banks of flooded creeks or streams are the most frequent victims.

Tom Millwee, state coordinator for the Texas Division of Emergency Management, warned that heavy rains soften river and stream bank soil, making it unstable. The bank can give way under even the lightest of toddlers, tossing the victim into the flood.

Millwee also noted the tremendous power of floodwaters. "As little as two feet of flooding will float most cars, trucks or SUV's," he said, "and combined with the all very deceptive."

locks on many of today's vehicles, when those are shorted out by water there isn't a ready escape."

Flash floods in Texas most often occur in late afternoon and early morning hours when visibility is low and floodwaters are most deceptive. "The darkness combined with the fact that flood waters are almost always deeper and swifter than they appear can lead to disaster for the experienced driver," said Millwee, "and even in daytime, a flash flood is Because light is bent as it travels through water, the flood is nearly always deeper than it appears to be, and because we must view the flooding from the side, we judge the speed of the water from the edge of the flow. Even if someone has crossed a low area hundreds of times, the combination of debris and roadway damage can cause a false sense of security. The rule of thumb should be to stay out of the area and avoid potential flooding.

"The only way to be safe when floods threaten is to stay out of low water areas. A pint of milk or a trip to the mall just isn't worth a life," Millwee added.

Historic cemetery draws tourist by MaryBelle Brown contributor

Salado Cemetery is one of the oldest and most beautifully kept cemeteries in the Central Texas Area. It is located in the south-east part of the Village of Salado on Baines Street between Royal Street and Holland Road.

The exact date of the beginning of the cemetery known as "Old Salado Grave Yard" is unknown but historians believe it had its beginning around the time of the first United States Post Office was opened in the Village of Salado in 1852.

The oldest grave marked by a tombstone is that of Zilla Bush who died in 1856. However, older residents of Salado recall seeing older gravestones when they, as children, visited the cemetery. One resident reported that she had noted a burial which took place in 1854 and was told there were older graves. The stone placed in 1854 disappeared a few years ago and was most likely taken as a prank. There were "ghost stories" and legends circulated among residents of Central Texas regarding burials in the Salado Cemetery for generations. The cemetery has become a tourist attraction because of its history

A number of prominent pioneers who led in the settlement and development of Salado and Bell County are buried in the cemetery and this adds to the interest of visitors to Salado. It is a regular stop for tour buses and for groups of children from Bell County schools.

The land for the cemetery, referred to by historians and deed records as "Old Salado Grave Yard," was donated to the "People of the Town of Salado" by E.S.C. Robertson when the land for the town and for Salado College was donated in 1859-60.

Robertson had moved to Salado in 1854 and had purchased a large tract of land. It was on this tract of land that the town and the college came to be located. An old burial ground was located on Robertson's property and it was this piece of ground that was donated and referred to in deed records as the "Old Salado Grave Yard." The exact date of this transaction is unknown but historians believe it was at the same time the land for the town and the college was donated. The burial land was located a short distance southeast of the college property.

The title of the property was not filed for record until 1888.

Old Salado Graveyard held approximately 2880 burial sites. This is based on a study of the number of rows of graves and the number of graves in each row. A survey done in 1967 was able to locate only a small part of this number as there is known to be many unmarked and "lost" graves in the cemetery. A view of the Old Salado Grave Yard, now known as the "Old Original" part of the cemetery reveals large vacant areas among the old graves where these lost and unmarked graves are located.

There have always been a few interested individuals who have labored to take care of the cemetery and to acquire additional land. Since the initial gift of the land where the Old Grave Yard was located there have been seven purchases and one gift of land for grave sites and the cemetery has continued in use, providing for approximately 2100 burials.

An endownment fund for providing perpetual care was begun in 1967 and the interest from this fund plus generous donations and memorial gifts provide for maintenance, caretaking, development and future ex-

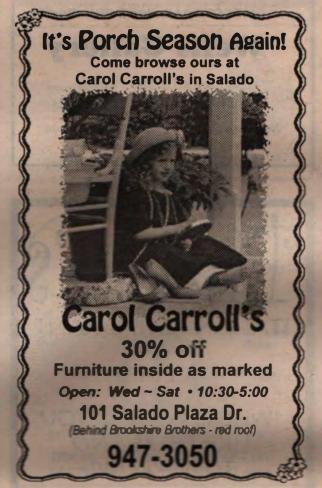

The Cemetery Association, in existence since the late 1800's, was formally organized, incorporated, and chartered in 1993. A very active and caring group of volunteers make up the Executive Board Committee which meets quarterly and as needed in between quarterly meetings to handle all problems and to set goals and long-term plans for the care and development of the cemetery. Friends of Salado Cemetery Association, Inc. meet annually to elect officers and to hear reports from the Executive Board Commit-

Residents of the Village of Salado and others from around the area are very supportive of the cemetery and the work of the Executive Board. In keeping with this, there is an annual Memorial Day service to honor the ancestors and family members of those buried in the cemetery as well as the approximately 300 veterans buried there. These veterans represent service in peace time and in the Texas Revolutionary War, Mexican War, Indian Wars, War Between the States, Spanish-American War, World War I. World War II, Korean War and the Vietnam War.

Mickey Mouse was created in 1928. The very early Mickey toys, made from 1928 to about 1938, pictured a "pie-eyed" Mickey (part of the eye was shaped like a piece of pie.) He also had a potbelly; a long, thin tail; and stovepipe arms and legs. His shoes were very large, and he had two buttons on his shorts, glovelike hands and only four fingers. The early American toys were marked with a version of Walt Enterprises name or initials. Many of the toys were made of lithographed tin or celluloid. The Mickey Mouse image was so popular in the 1930s that it saved at leaset two companies bankruptcy. The Lionel Train company made a handcar with Mickey and

Minnie pumping and sold more than 350,000 of them for the 1934 Christmas season. The Ingersoll Waterbury Company was on the verge of bankruptcy in 1933 when it started making the first Mickey Mouse watches. One rare toy is the Mickey the Jazz Drummer toy that was made in two versions, the open-mouthed drummer made by Nifty Toys and distributed by George Borgfeldt Corporation of New York in 1931 sold a few years ago for more than $4,000. The other version, Mickey with a closed mouth, is marked "D.D.G.M. Germany" and sold for about $2,500. Both toys are "plunger type": Push a lever on his neck, and Mickey beats his drum. Both versions show Mickey's hands with five

Rains renew hope for crops

James M. Davis Co. Ext. Agent

The rains last week were worth several million dollars to Central Texas farmers and cattle ranchers. The corn started wilting by the last week of April; indicating the plants were under moisture stress. The rains completely turned our crops and pastures around by the end of last week. Had we missed this rainy spell you could have started marking the corn crop off.

Hopefully we will continue to get timely rains during May and June and make a good corn and sorghum crop as well as get good weight gains on our calf crop. Ben County's corn, sorghum and calf crop annually account for about 20 million dollars in income.

The rain could easily have prevented us from seeing this income cut in half.

Over the past few years we have been getting an increasing number of calls from people wanting to control prickly pear and other cacti.

Years ago ranchers used their prickly pear during droughts to feed their cattle. They would burn the stickers off the pears thus allowing the cattle to eat the leaves. After burning, and the cattle consuming the plants, producers would grub the stumps, thus ridding the pastures of prickly pears for many years.

Burning pears has not been done in this area of the state for many years. The pear population has greatly increased and trying to mechanically rid land of pears actually makes them worse. Therefore we are getting a lot of calls about chemically controlling prickly pears.

To assist people with proper ways to control prickly pear, there will be a Cactus Control Seminar on 6 p.m. May 11 on the Mike Hams Farm east of Cameron. For licensed applicators, 1 CEU in IPM will be given at the seminar. Dr. Barron Rector, Extension Range Specialist from Texas A&M will be the speaker on cacti control.

To get to the Harris Farm, take Highway 36 east out of Cameron, cross the long bridge over the Little River and turn left onto FM 2095 which is the first road to the left past the bridge. Proceed on FM 2095 for approximately 1 1/2 miles and turn left onto County Road 227. The Harris Farm is approximately three miles down County Road 227 on the left

For more information about the workshop, contact the Milam County Extension Office at 254-697-3382.

Pecan growers need to mark their calendars for a pecan field day at the Stewart Orchard south of Academy on May 20. We will have more details about the pecan field day in next week's article.

Extension programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, national origin or disability.

BBQ and dance held at Stardust

Ballroom dancers may need bibs over their dress-up clothes at Saturday's (May 13) gala of the Stardust Ballroom Dance Club. They'll feast on old-fashioned barbecue at 7 p.m. before the Dick Thomas Orchestra hits the first downbeat at eight in the Knights of Columbus hall here.

The barbecue plus total trimmings is a gift from club member Pegge McLennan, who has served up "hundreds" of barbecue banquets at her Hueco Oaks home near Waco in the county named for her family. The dinner is free, but donations will be accepted for the non-profit club's general treasury.

Visitors are invited at $20 per couple, and uniquely among dance clubs, Stardust welcomes single guests. Enforced dress code is coat and tie for men, after-five attire for ladies. Up to 12 high school and young college students are admitted free if they first have made reservations by calling 771-5619. General information is available at 773-6620.

Stardust dances are held on the second Saturday of each month. Member dues go to hire the orchestra and rent the hall. Club membership is limited to the comfortable capacity of the hall, allowing adequate space for

Pen pals for over 50 years

By Tumbleweed Smith

Scottie Molloy of Uvalde has had a Pen Pal for fifty years. "It was a school project," says Scottie. "A teacher got the list of names from a publication -called Highlights. Mercedes was in Barcelona, Spain and we started writing when I was twelve. Over the years we kept up and she married her Italian Pen Pal. They moved to Milan, Italy and now spend their summers on Lake Como and the rest of the year in Milan. They're retired now."

Scottie moved around. too. "I started writing to her when I lived in Maryland. Then I went into the Army and continued to write to her. I married a Texan and came to Uvalde. We have traveled quite a bit together."

They write about all sorts of things. "The last time we communicated the topic was Zydeco, the Cajun music. I sent her a tape of Zydeco music and wrote her a history of it. We don't just write back and forth about our families and all that. I've learned a lot about Spain and Italy."

Mercedes sent Scottie a tape of the four tenors singing at La Scala, Milan's famous opera house.

Through letters, they experienced each other get married, have children, raise families, begin careers and end them. "Fifty years is a lifetime that we've been together. I feel sort of like we're related. When something happens I think I've got to write Mercedes about this. I hope someday, even after all these years that we'll get to meet. She has said she would like to come over and I've invited her, so maybe one of these days we will meet."

Their letters to each other are long, four pages or so. They exchange pictures and gifts. Scottie has a picture of Mercedes' dog, Alva, taken as a pup. Alva died at the age of 17. While we were visiting, Scottie reached over and picked up a letter from her Pen Pal. "This is from March and it has pictures of her grandchild. She has only one. In this letter she's telling me about her husband, who is quite ill."

They write each other about every three or four months. "Mercedes was a translator for a pharmaceutical company. Her English was real good then. But now she doesn't use her English very much so it's not quite as good. But I can still read between the lines, so to speak. I have learned a little Spanish and it comes in handy. Occasionally she'll ask me how we say something in Texas."

Mercedes and her husband live in a small condo in Milan. Scottie lives in a small house in Uvalde that she says is about 1400 square feet.

"This must be a big Texas house to her. She asks me why I need so much room."

Scottie loves writing and receiving letters. "You know with TV and all, people don't write letters as often as they used to. They don't take the time. They just dash off something on the internet. People used to go to the mailbox with such high anticipation. I still do.

"Letter writing has become a lost art. It's a wonderful way to organize and express your thoughts. To me, it's the closest form of communication. It's so personal. There's such pleasure in getting a handwritten letter from someone. This has given me the greatest joy over the last fifty years."
