Meetings set on Zoning

The Village of Salado Steering Committee will review the final zoning map during a 9 a.m. April 23 workshop meeting at the municipal building.

The steering committee will also discuss the upcoming public workshop and formal public hearing as part of the process in adopting the Zoning Ordinance.

The committee has the entire reviewed 140-plus page Zoning Ordinance during several workshop sessions.

A town hall meeting on the Zoning Ordinance has been scheduled for 6:30 p.m. May at the Salado Civic Center.

A formal public hearing on the Zoning Ordinance is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. June 17 at the Salado Civic Center.

Trustees approve new phones

Salado I.S.D. Trustees during their April 21 meeting approved a $47,407 bid from Folkerson to install a new telephone system on the school campuses. The board also approved three additional teaching positions for the 2003-2004 school year.

Technology Director Earl Bragg recommended Folkerson for the replacement of the outdated phone system. In addition to the core system, the contract calls for replacing the 49 phones currently in use on the school campuses and central office.

The system allows for a maximum of 256 ports, which Bragg told trustees would serve two more school campuses as the district grows.

With a goal of having a phone in every classroom on campus, the district may spend an additional $84,336 in coming years for telephones.

Bragg said that the district will save over $13,000 in lease and other fees per year with the current demand on the phone system. An additional campus will result in more than $17,000 in annual savings.

The phone system, which will be installed over the summer break and will have voice mail for every teacher, will utilize a voice over internet protocol, as well as traditional telephone technology.

Trustees approved an additional 18 teaching slots for the 2003-2004 school year. The additional teaching slots are the equivalent of three full-time teachers, but will be filled with part-time and full-time teachers. Dr. Robin Battershell told trustees that the district will concentrate on Spanish, special education and fine arts with the added teaching slots. The additional slots are expected to cost approximately $100,000 next year.

The board voted to hire four new teachers, including a new vocational agriculture teacher. Trustees hired Brad McMurtry as the second vocational agriculture teacher for the district. He will join Robert Daniell in the department. McMurtry will teach a horticulture class, biotechnology class, introduction to ag science class and a work studies course.

The board also voted to hire an integrated Physics and Chemistry teacher at the High School, a position which was approved and budgeted but not filled this year. Linda Borchardt is a fully certified teacher with 15 years classroom experience. Jennifer Jonas, also fully certified with 13 to 14 years experience, was approved for a High School English teaching position. Elaine Ranaud, certified with one year experience, was approved for a High School Math position.

Trustees also approved the state recommended textbook list, as well as new contract forms and supplemental duty agreements recommended by legal counsel Schwartz & Eichelbaum.

Parade May 1 shows support of our troops

A group of local citizens will show support for soldiers in Iraq with a parade down Main Street 5 p.m. May 1.

Christy Egbert, whose son and husband are both serving in the Middle East, will be the Grand Marshal of the parade. The Egbert family was featured in the April 16 issue of Salado Village Voice.

Organizers invite the community to participate in the parade and to line Main Street for the traffic jam 5 p.m. May 1.

Dr. Don Ellis will lead a procession of 13 antique cars already signed up for the parade.

For more information about participating in the parade, call Teresa Tolbert at 947-5982.

Marching with Western Values

Reasonable people can disagree about whether the war in Iraq will reduce or increase terrorism, whether building a democracy there is practical or not, whether Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld forged a brilliant military plan or skimped on ground troops. But what the Iraqi battlefield has demonstrated beyond any possible argument is the moral superiority of Western culture.

Armies march not just on their stomachs, but with their values. The contrasting conduct of American and British troops, reflecting the best aspects of the West, and of Saddam Hussein's soldiers and guerrillas, representing an Arab political culture corrupted by tyranny, is a showcase for two differing traditions with utterly divergent styles of war-making.

It's the difference between hiding behind women and children and doing everything to avoid harming them, between random missile attacks and precision weapons, between executing prisoners and treating them humanely, between faking surrenders and accepting them, between transparent government lies and vigorous, open self-criticism, between setting oil wells on fire and putting them out.

The scrupulousness of the Allied warrior has been thousands of years in the making. As historian Victor Davis Hanson writes: "This legal and secular idea of 'Rules of War' is an original Western concept that began with the Greeks' efforts to define the way soldiers should fight. Indeed, almost all the military's present notions of moral war-making, formal declaration and cessation of hostilities, armistices, treaties, respect for noncombatants military in nature. Its humanity is clear in the rush to provide food and water to suffering Iraqi civilians. Its commitment to self-criticism is visible in the military briefings, at which any journalist from anywhere can ask any question. Its respect for the individual is evident in the risking of many brave souls to save just one, a 19-year-old private from West Virginia.

Make no mistake, of course: The Allied military kills with a ferocious efficiency. But the advanced weapons that make that possible are also a function of Western values. Without the great unleashing of human potential that has taken place in the West of the past 200 years, there would be no "smart" weapons.

The tragedy of the post-World War II Arab world is that strongmen like Saddam have used totalitarian politics to impose a stasis on their societies. The Allied invasion will provide a chance for ordinary Arabs to revive their politics and culture. Surely it is this possible opening that residents of the holy city of Najaf were applauding along with the arrival of Allied troops.

House passes "No Growth" two year budget; "New Taxes" predicted at school, city, county levels

The Texas House of Representatives passed their version of the next biennial budget early last Thursday morning, totalling $117.7 billion, which is four billion bucks more than the Comptroller says is available to spend. Taking that shortage into account - what lawmakers in the lower chamber have done, through a series of "smoke and mirrors," is create a "no growth" budget - for a growing State. A dynamic State that has more children to educate each year, together with increased needs for health-human services, due to high growth patterns at both ends of the population-age graph.

The proposed spending plan came after days of debate that chewed up 486 amendments (drawn mostly by disheartened and outnumbered Democrats) who failed to overturn the Republican's master plan to create a "lean and mean" State government (mostly the latter) without one penny of "New Taxes."

Final vote on the measure was 100-45 which means 16 Demos crossed the aisle to vote with Republicans - presumably to allow them to take home a record vote on "fiscal one-upsmanship." One wonders what will happen when they finally get home and face voters who may soon be paying higher property taxes?

What the Senate will do with the budget when it crosses the rotunda is anyone's guess but with a 19-12 Republican majority, it is fairly safe to assume that only internal fund shifts will occur, thus setting the stage for a "no new tax" conference committee, led by GOPers.

COMPTROLLER IS NEXT AT BAT

Either before or after the conferees get their cold hands on the two budget schemes, the spotlight will shift to the Comptroller, who must certify this mess before it becomes law and rather than approve a new budget that is already $4 billion in the hole, some believe she may revise her current estimate to near the rumored $12-14 billion mark (which she and her peers in GOPland have pooh-poohed) thus tossing lawmakers, the Guv and their austere budget into a "Special Session."

Keep in mind that "Grandma" Strayhorn also threatened to withhold certification of any budget that raids the emergency "Rainy Day Fund." A careful check of the House version will uncover nearly $300 million pulled from the "Rainy Day" emergency lockbox and placed in the Governor's hands to bribe, at his discretion, foreign & domestic companies to move to Texas.

Now that the Guv has finally returned from "fiddling" around in Australia, while the capitol was burning with budget problems - we think he needs to answer the question that Strayhorn is no doubt pondering - "Where is the GOP's "No New Tax" pledge could shift unfunded service needs to local governments, thus forcing "New Taxes" on already overburdened property owners.

Republican dream of shrinking the government (and hated regulations) through "No New Taxes" to come true, while at the same time producing nightmares for taxpayers at the local level - as service-costs are shifted from the State to cities, counties and school districts.

Those willing to discuss this potential transfer of tax liability last week in Austin, (anonymously, of course), included Republican lawmakers and agency staffers (even in the Guv's office), who all admitted their abiding fear that the budget will force local taxing authorities to raise property taxes (thereby uncorking a negative voter reaction) to pay for important services the state requires but will not be funding.

Question once again arises: "What's the difference between "no-newtaxes" at the state level, that forces increased "New" property taxes at the local level?" If that can be answered with honesty and a straight face - then we may be entering a new level of nirvana - at least politically.

Regardless, this question should be raised every time a lawmaker or statewide official shows up to take accolades for the "great work" they will claim was accomplished by their "do nothing" 78th Legislative Session.

Answers should be remembered when going to the polls next year, and two years after that.

LIGHTER SIDE - 1957

One of our more faithful readers (and a loyal member of the local Do-No-Gooder group) is Don Clayton, who shared some fun from the internet. No doubt most of you will recall the year 1957 - but wonder if you remember what was being talked about during those peaceful post Korean war days, when "Ike" was our golfing leader and folks were thinking along the following lines:

"I'll tell you one thing, if things keep going the way they are, its going to be impossible to buy a week's groceries for $20.00."

"Did you hear the post office is thinking about charging a dime just to mail a letter?"

"If they raise the minimum wage to $1, nobody will be able to hire out-

The West's appreciation for the rule of law can be seen in the lawyerly parsing of targets to ensure that they are valid and

U.S. and British soldiers, superior in firepower, superior in their moral conduct, will deliver two things in Iraq: First, victory, and then the possibility of a different, better future.

Justice Department should fight terrorism, not smoking lawsuit

BY EDWIN FEULNER

For the first time since World War II, we're at war on two fronts. In Iraq we're fighting against an army, and everywhere else we're battling terrorism.

It's a full-time job, as General John Attorney Ashcroft has acknowledged.

"The war against terrorism is now the single, over-arching priority of justice and law enforcement," Ashcroft said last year. "Not just the men and women of the Department of Justice and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, but of the 18,000 state and local law-enforcement agencies as well."

That singleness of purpose has enabled us to break up at least four domestic terrorist cells, obtain 108 convictions or guilty pleas from terrorists, and deport 478 people linked to the Sept. 11 tragedy.

But not everyone at the Justice Department shares Ashcroft's vision that terrorism is job number one. Some remain fixated on an older battle--namely, a $289 billion lawsuit against tobacco companies.

In the interest of full disclosure, I'll admit to enjoying an occasional cigar and even a pipe, and I'll also admit that tobacco companies supported Heritage last year to the tune of 0.26 percent of our budget that makes me wonder what's going on here. It's the mystery of why these lawsuits--first filed in 1999 by the Clinton administration under claims that even then Attorney General Janet Reno suspected wouldn't hold up--are still around.

As things stand now, a federal judge has tossed out a huge part of the suit, saying government attorneys had misinterpreted two laws. The only part that remains, claims related to alleged violations of federal racketeering laws, also

In a letter to a constituent in 2000, he wrote, "I am concerned that the...lawsuit could set an unwise precedent leading to the federal government filing lawsuits against countless other legal industries."

And even now, the Justice Department's civil division is handling it without his supervision. An unidentified official told The New York Times he never signed off on the latest filing. Which raises the question: Did the Attorney General tell his civil division attorneys to do this? If so, why didn't he sign the filings? And if not, then why are they doing it?

With the possible exception of Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, Ashcroft would seem the least likely member of President Bush's cabinet to fall victim to what's known in Washington as "agency capture." That's when an outsider is appointed to run an agency, but the career employees there take advantage of their superior knowledge of its inner workings to run the place as they please.

The purpose of having a president appoint the members of his cabinet is to enable him to put people who share their vision into these jobs. People are policy -- a principle, by the way, we defended even when it was the Republicans who wanted to deny President Clinton his fair share of political appointees. The whole principle is thwarted if cabinet officials allow agency employees to do as they like.

If Attorney General Ashcroft isn't going to supervise his employees, he can expect them to meander from his priorities even more. If he's changed his mind about tobacco suits, he needs to say so. If he hasn't, which I suspect to be the case, he needs to order these suits dropped and these attorneys to turn May I suggest the "overarching priority" of fighting terrorism?

Death tax hurts small businesses

Only the wealthy few?

BY JACK FARIS

There it was, on the cover of the April 13 Washington Post Magazine: "Why is the father of the world's richest man trying to make all those rich people so uncomfortable?"

The man in question is William H. Gates, Sr. and he's become a leading advocate for preserving the Death Tax.

And those "rich" people are in favor of permanent repeal of the Death Tax. The Post quotes Mr. Gates as saying "Americans have been convinced that the estate tax, which affects wealthy only the few ... should be repealed."

Let's face it; the Death Tax affects people who by any reasonable definition would not be considered the wealthy few. In fact, more than half the Death Tax revenues come from estates of less than $5 million. And that's not money stuffed under a mattress or in the bank - that's the value of all the assets of the business - the property and equipment to keep a company operating.

For a small business, assets like a storefront, a their attention elsewhere. warehouse and some delivery trucks can quickly add

"That's like saying cancer only affects those who die from it," said Frayda Levin, a small-business owner in Hackensack, New Jersey. In a letter to the local newspaper, she pointed out "much of the burden Death Taxes impose does not show up in tax receipts, but in needless lawyer and accountant bills, wasted time and personal anguish."

Levin's family has spent $50,000 in attorney fees for estate planning and continues to spend thousands of dollars more each year for accountants and insurance.

Mike Nobis of Quincy, Illinois doesn't consider himself one of the wealthy few either. He told reporters on Capitol Hill, "My last name is Nobis. Not Rockefeller. Not Gates."

Nobis, part of three generations working in the family business, lost both parents in a tragic auto accident. The Death Tax took $300,000 that the family had planned to use to expand the business and create more jobs in Quincy.

Karen Brown and her late husband were in business in the Midwest for 18 years. When her husband died in March 2000, she found herself a 38-year-old widow with two daughters, ages six and eight. Fortunately, prudent estate planning saved the businesses but Karen worries that those businesses might not survive the six-toseven million-dollar tax burden in the event of her death

"I am looking for the best way to pass on the family business to my girls," says Brown. "The Death Tax would wipe out literally everything my husband and I have worked for."

Congress took steps to repeal the tax in 2001. and it is being gradually reduced until it expires in 2010. But it is n stated in 2011. In the meantime, small-business owners (aka the wealthy few!) must continue to pour thousands of dollars a year into estate planning to avoid losing that to which they devoted a life-

No, Mr. Gates, the Death Tax doesn't target the rich. It reaps its grim benefits from the entrepreneurs of America and prevents them from devoting time and resources to building businesses and creating jobs.

Congress can fix the mess by simply repealing the Death Tax now-and forever.

WHACKS AID FOR

W

If cynicism was a planet, the Bush administration would be Jupiter, the biggest of all.

These people have turned cynicism into political art, routinely claiming in public to be supportive of children, education, veterans, and other popular constituencies, while maneuvering in the back rooms to gut budgets and programs that support these very constituencies. An especially disgusting example is Bush's recent gut job on the program that provides essential school aid for the children of our troops

Yes, the very troops that he has put at ultimate risk to fulfill his war and oil fantasies in Iraq. In February, as gung-ho George was rallying the troops to go face death, his budget leaders were quietly pushing a plan to slash funding for a vital education program called Impact Aid. Created during the Truman years, this is a tried and true program that pro vides extra funding to local school districts that serve areas with large military bases.

These school districts are hit with a triple economic whammy - first, the land of the military base is exempt from property taxes needed to fund local schools; second, the schools are obligated to serve the military children; and, third these children often have special needs, including counseling when mom or dad are about to be sent off to war.

Yet, at a time when school budgets are already stretched beyond thin, and at a time when we ought to be reaching out to support military families - our stands on shaky ground.

So why has Attorney General Ashcroft allowed the suit to go forward? As a senator, he opposed it.

of NFIB (the National Federation of Independent Business), the nation's largest small-business advocacy group.

"compassionate conservative" commander-in-chief wants to whack Impact Aid by more than half.

For example, the Virginia Beach school district, which serves several military bases, would have its aid cut from $12 million a year to $4.5 million under George's plan. The local school superintendent told New York Times columnist Bob Herbert: "That would be fairly devastating for us."

It also is devastating to our nation's democratic principles of fairness and justice, which are the very values that George says he wants to extend to Iraq.

Supreme court ruling opens door to stop flag burning

Dear Editor:

Hurrah! There should only be one more unofficial or unauthorized public burning of an American Flag in the USA.

A recent Supreme Court ruling overturned an appellate court ruling on a case presented for a Virginia suit. The contention was that a person had been threatened by the burning of a cross. Prior to this ruling, courts ruled that the burning of a cross was only a "freedom of speech" act. This new ruling by the court agreed with the plaintiff that "this was construed as an act of threatening or source for violence to burn a cross in their presence and not merely a manifestation of free speech."

I certainly would be threatened by the unauthorized burning of an American Flag in my presence. This would be to me a "motion of terrorism" toward me. I would feel the act was threatening me personally, since this flag is a patriotic symbol of stability for my country.

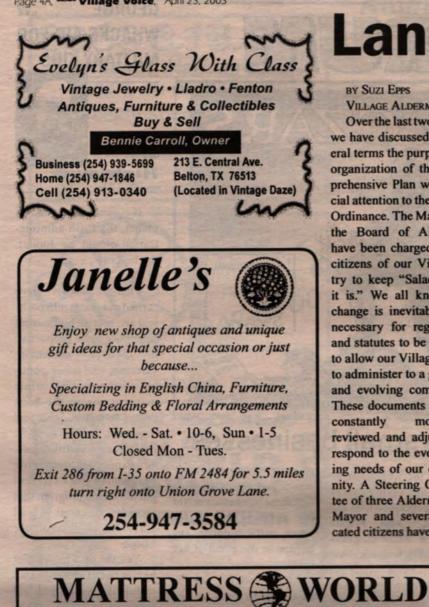

This would be conceived by me as the act of terrorism toward my country and not some free speech manifestation.

I can envision only the one more flag burning! Any patriotic citizen of the USA that witnesses this burning should file suit o the precedent case, which could be taken also all the way to the Supreme Court.

Evelyn's Glass With Class Land Use & Zoning

BY SUZI EPPS

VILLAGE ALDERMAN Over the last two weeks, we have discussed in general terms the purpose and organization of the Comprehensive Plan with special attention to the Zoning Ordinance. The Mayor and the Board of Alderman have been charged by the citizens of our Village to try to keep "Salado what it is." We all know that change is inevitable. It is necessary for regulations and statutes to be in place to allow our Village's staff to administer to a growing and evolving community. These documents must be constantly monitored, reviewed and adjusted to respond to the ever-growing needs of our community. A Steering Committee of three Aldermen, the Mayor and several dedicated citizens have charted the course for this important document for our community.

We have mentioned the matrix included in the Zoning Ordinance and would like to give a brief overview of what it means for the citizens of Salado. Keep in mind that one of the most important aspects of this document is the intent to allow nonconforming uses lawfully in existence and operating prior to this Ordinance being enacted to lawfully continue thus "grandfathering" uses, lots and structures.

The matrix is an attempt to outline specific uses to be permitted, prohibited and conditional. A Conditional Use Permit may permit a conditional use in a particular zoning district. A conditional use is a land use which, because of its

The uses included in the matrix are listed under the following headings:

These uses are charted in relation to the specific zoning districts as follows:

Agriculture, Single-Family Estate Residential, Single-Family Residential, Single-Family Residential-Patio Home, Single-Family Attached Residential, Multi-Family Residential, Office, Local Retail, Regional Retail, Mixed Use, Business Park, Commercial, Historic District, Planned Development and Conditional Use Permit.

We will have copies of the proposed Zoning Ordinance and the Zoning Map at the Municipal building and the Salado Public Library for your review by April 28. A workshop/town hall meeting will be scheduled for May 1st with a public hearing tentatively scheduled for June 17th. The workshop/town meeting will afford citizens the opportunity to ask questions and allow the Steering Committee to address those issues. Both the workshop/ town hall meeting and the public hearing will be held at the Salado Civic Centerat 6:30 p.m. We invite all questions to be directed to Alderman Vic Means or Alderman Suzi Epps at 947 5060. Next week we will review setbacks, coverage, maximum size, recreational vehicle parking, HUD Code Mobile homes and sexually oriented businesses.

4. On average, how much time do you spend on your job and with the school board?

Carlson: I average six days a week, but owning my business, I am flexible with my hours.

Cortes: I usually work 8 a.m.-5 p.m. I have the support of my wife and children.

Kelley: I average between 50-60 hours a week, but this is important enough for me to make time.

Daniell: Time flexibility is her best availability.

Ervi: The School Board is more time consuming when it comes to the budget, but less time consuming during the summer. I spend about 10 hours a week on the School Board. In closing statements, Cortes said, "I am a team player and will exercise policy." His past experience will help to bring the district up to standards and become a solid entity that will continue to flow, he says2.

"I am dedicated to the school and community," says Kelley. "I know you will select two good members to the Board. If I am unsure of an issue, I promise to investigate to get the correct information."

"I have accepted to be part of the team and would like to continue to represent the district," says Ervi. We have wellrounded children and good things are happening, according to Ervi. Change is slow, but it is coming, we need to be flexible enough to adjust to the needs of the district.

"We have excellent schools, and an excellent administration," stated Daniell. "I want to be part of a wonderful team."

"I am blessed being in Salado, it is refreshing to see everyone involved and encourage everyone to go out and vote," Carlson said.

Library Board Candidates

Tonya Kornegay has lived in Salado for three years. She is currently employed with Killeen ISD. She wanted to become more involved in the community, and said running for the Library Board was a good opportunity to spread some of her ideas. "Start small, think big," says Kornegay.

Susan Shobe and her husband, Mike, have lived in Salado for eight years. They have two grown children. She has been the District Librarian for Salado ISD since 1995 and has been involved with the Salado Public Library for seven years. "This is an opportunity to contribute to the community," states Shobe.

She has served on the Library Board for five years. The Library is continuing with great things she said: book collection is up 50 percent, hours of operation have doubled, patron participation has tripled, doubled in space, and doubled circulation. "We are proud of the new building and library," says Shobe. Future goals for the Library consist of more children and community programs. The Library is in a good financial position, 40 percent of the new building is paid off.

Jon Newman, University of Texas at Austin graduate with a degree in architecture, as he put it, is the "opposition." "The Library paid too much for too little space," Newman said. "Indications also show that the Library can operate with a lower sales tax." The sales tax could be cut to onequarter percent with no problem, he said. The library is currently receiving one-half percent. "The new building, according to Texas Assessibility, is not up to standards," says Newman.

Questions and Answers

1. Where do you see the Library at the end of the year? What resources do you want to see added to the facility?

Newman: More effeciency. I would like to see it as a joint use facility with the Village, possibly moved to Hodge Field where they could share the parking lot and restrooms. Even the possiblity of moving it to Pace Park.

Shobe: I would like to see more use of the new space, increase programs for children and adults, and increase hours of operation.

Kornegay: I would like more computer courses for adults and instruction on the internet. With a large group of bilingual children in the community, volunteers to teach English to the children and their parents would be a beneficial program to have.

What type of materials will you emphasize on?

Kornegay: More software, educational, and learning material.

Shobe: I have served six years on the long range planning committee and want to continue to focus on reading for pleasure for adults, books for children, and more genealogy.

Newman: He says that we should continue in the same direction that the Board is already headed and focus on supply and demand of the community.

In closing, Kornegay said, "there is a lot to learn, I will rely on existing Board members for that. I hope to add to and assist in the building of the new Library.

"I have enjoyed serving on the Board, it is a natural fit, considering I am a librarian," Shobe says.

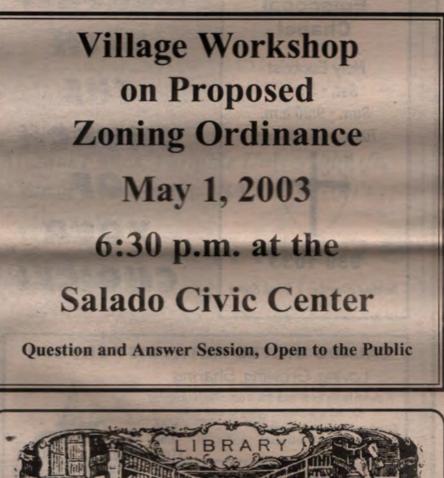

"This is a difficult time for tax money," stated Newman. "My experience in the architecture field will help with the building choice."

Evens best Odds in Alumni thriller

BY CHRIS MCGREGOR STAFF WRITER

On a day when early clouds parted to reveal bright, warm sunshine, the second annual Salado Eagle Alumni baseball game and homerun contest was held at Eagle Field April 19. The game was originally scheduled for Feb. 15, but had to be rescheduled due to rain.

Despite the game taking place on Easter weekend, over 25 graduates took the field and stretched out longneglected muscles in an attempt to rehash former glory, real or imagined, on the diamond.

The bats might have seemed a bit heavier, and the base paths a tad longer than they used to be, but a respectable showing was made by the old-timers breaking pitches and taking advantage of a liberal strikezone.

Roger Buckley, class of 1997, relieved Oborski in the middle innings, but was plagued by early wildness and sketchy defense as The Evens tied the score for the first time in the game.

Alumni Game MVP and class of 2000 graduate David Palmer pitched the final three innings for The Evens, assaulting The Odds with a barrage of beanballs and an occassional strike, a strategy of intimidation which kept his team in the game.

Palmer pitched out of a bases loaded jam in the bottom of the sixth, then whiffed three consecutive Odds to seal the victory in the seventh and final inning.

In the homerun contest that preceded the game, Brooks Frazier won the Over 30 division, while class of 1994 alum Richard Berumen outdueled '91 alumni Frank Cloud in a playoff to take the Under 30 homerun title.

Coach Melvin Bates, unable to pick a favorite, assisted in the coaching of both squads. Cliff Coleman captained The Odds and Dennis Cabaniss led The Evens.

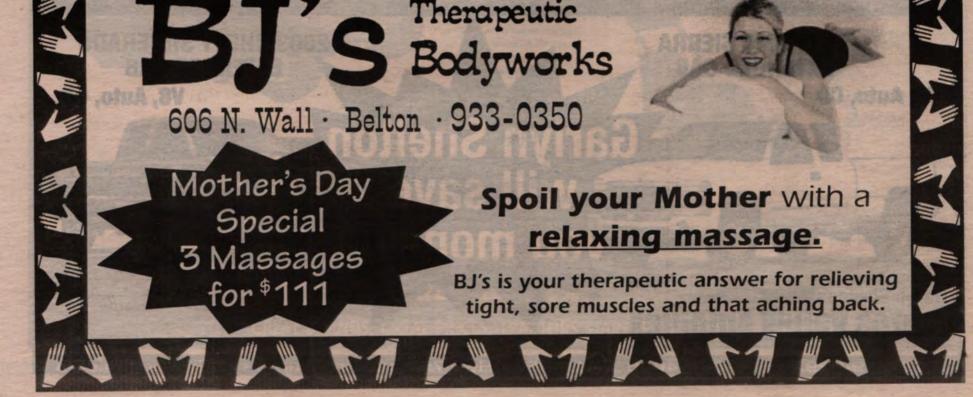

Overall, nary an Eagle alum escaped without at least one strikeout (bat speed tends to slow with age), and many will be nursing sore muscles well into next week. But everyone departed smiling, and The Odds, if the format for next year's contest stays the same, look forward to avenging their loss.

What should you do with bonds that mature when market interest rates are low?

If you're a fixed-income investor, you'll eventually have to answer a key question: What should you do with bonds that mature when market interest rates are low?

You could, of course, reinvest your proceeds in bonds that pay lower interest rates. The down side of this choice is obvious, you'll receive less income. As an alternative, you could put the funds from your maturing bonds in a money market account until rates rise again, but that might take awhile and, in the meantime, you will have almost certainly missed out on some better opportunities: ---

Here's a third option: instead of worrying about the haze of interest-rate movements and how you should respond to them, consider and "all-weather" fixed-income investment strategy. Specifically, think about building a "bond ladder."

To create a bond ladder, you invest in an array of short, intermediate, and long-term, high quality bonds. When rates are rising, you use the proceeds from your maturing bonds to buy new bonds at the higher levels, thus increasing your portfolio's return. When market rates are falling, you'll continue to benefit from the higher rates offered by your longer-term bonds.

By building a bond ladder, you'll also receive other key benefits:

· Reduced volatility when you construct a bond ladder, you achieve a degree of diversification in your fixed-income holdings. And diversification is important because bonds of varying maturities often

react differently to interest rate changes and other market conditions.

· Reduced interest-rate and reinvestment risk - discipline - when you create both short-term and long- a structured investment term bonds carry their own risks. If you own short-term you'll help yourself stay bonds, you incur "reinvestment risk" the risk, described above, of having to reinvest matured bonds at a lower interest rate. And if you own long-term bonds, you face "interestrate risk" - the risk that your bonds could lose value if interest rates rise. But when you build a bond ates interest payments that match your needs - i.e.g., higher in some months you can help address some of your savings and budgetary concerns. SEE BOND MONEY PAGE 13A

Medicines only one cause of swelling

Dear Dr. Donohue: My neighbor had swollen legs, ankles and feet. They looked like they were ready to burst. I read that Vioxx could cause this. She was taking it. She told her doctor, who stopped the medicine. Her swelling went down in three days. What do you think of that?

Answer: I think your neighbor has a good friend, you.

The name of your neighbor's condition is peripheral edema. Medicines are only one cause of it. However, when a person is on a medicine, the first place to look for such swelling is that medicine. Many widely used drugs are implicated. Antiinflammatory drugs are a good example. Nearly everyone has taken one or other of these drugs, whose names include Lodine, Voltaren, Motrin, Ibuprofen, Indocin, Advil, Naproxen, Daypro, Celebrex, Vioxx and Bextra. Beta blockers are another drug class that can also trigger peripheral edema. The same holds true for calcium channel blockers, whose main function is treatment of blood pressure and heart trouble. Also high on the list of peripheral edema causes are cortisone drugs and estrogen, the female hormone.

If you see your medicine listed, don't have a meltdown. These medicines are used by millions. Peripheral edema happens only to a few. And when a drug is responsible for it, treatment consists in stopping the drug. There are other, serious causes of leg, ankle and foot swelling. Heart failure, liver cirrhosis, kidney diseases, an underactive thyroid gland and blood clots in leg veins are among the more threatening causes of such swelling. Their treatment is more involved than the treatment of medicine-induced swelling.

The brand-new pamphlet on this common condition throws more light on peripheral edema, its causes and its treatments. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue -- No. 106W, P.O. Box

Dear Dr. Donohue: Before we have a divorce in the family (son versus daughter-in-law), please address that age-old belief that eating late in the evening tends to prevent people from losing weight. My daughter-in-law is trying to drop a few pounds, and my son insists she cannot do it because she eats too late in the evening. Both have their own opinions, and both are stubborn..

Answer: Contrary to popular folklore, the time when one eats has no influence on weight gain or weight loss. Excess calories at any time of day or night lead to excess body fat.

In candor, I used to believe that eating after 6 p.m. caused weight gain. I no longer subscribe to the theory.

Bible scripture for sculpted abs

Everyone is talking abs these days as the benchmark for your overall level of fitness, but there is a lot less being said about what actually constitutes a strong and functional midsection. Anyone serious about fitness should become knowledgeable about how the abdominals and lower back work together to become a great core stabilizer for the entire body.

In "The Body Sculpting Bible for ABS: The Way to Physical Perfection" (Hatherleigh Press), author James Villepigue has written a clear-cut book making abdominal exercise understandable and accessible to anyone. With separate editions for men and women, Villepigue tackles often overlooked issues when discussing abdominal training.

The first part of the book provides great information on what muscles make up your abdominal region and the importance of having proper nutrition in order to see results.

Part II gives examples of a variety of abdominal exercises using a mat, Swiss ball, medicine ball and other exercise equipment. Each exercise comes with pictures and a description of how to do the exercises correctly. Next comes a chapter on lower back exercises; one of the main reasons for striving for well-conditioned abdominals is achieving a balance between lower back and abdominal strength (core stability). These lowerback exercises accurately depict what type of exercises are required to achieve a well-rounded abdominal and lower back workout.

In Part III, a series of workouts is introduced that begins on a basic level and advances to harder and more intense combinations of exercises. Each workout has special instructions to help you determine at which level you should begin.

Overall, "The Body Sculpting Bible for ABS" is a great resource for your fitness library. With its easy-to-understand explanations of abdominal anatomy and nutrition, and comprehensive exercise programming, the book can help you work your way toward developing these much talked about, yet poorly understood core muscles.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

Question: Over the past few years, my posture has become terrible. My shoulders have started to slump forward and my back is becoming rounded. Are there any exercises I can do that can help?

Answer: There are exercises you can perform to strengthen the muscles of your shoulders and back, but that alone may not improve your posture. To improve your posture, you must first discover where the problem lies.

When doing a postural analysis, muscle strength and balance, structural abnormalities and body alignment are all considered. Finding out which of these should be corrected is the first step in getting things "straightened" out.

The primary cause of poor body alignment is bad posture. The muscles of your back and shoulders can be strong, but if you don't control those muscles and hold them in the proper position, it can result in rounded shoulders and a rounded back. Slouching in a chair at work or while driving can develop poor postural habits, which then transfer into everyday situations.

Use the following tips to help improve your posture:

• Keep all of your muscles strong, flexible and in balance.

Renzi performs at "Beethoven, Barbecue and Bluejeans" concert May 3 in Temple

The Temple Symphony Orchestra's annual "Beethoven, Barbecue & Bluejeans" concert will be held on May 3, at the Mary Alice Marshall Fine Arts Auditorium at Temple College. The venue combines an evening of classical music in a casual, relaxed atmosphere following a barbecue dinner in the Leopard Room. This popular event has become the traditional finale to the concert season.

The concert program features the Temple Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Thomas Fairlie. In continuing the orchestrais tradition of presenting one of Beethovenis symphonies each year, concertgoers will be treated to his Symphony No. 2 in D, Op. 36. Also on the program will be Wagner's "Overture to Tannhauser" and Rachmaninoff's Concerto No. 2 in C minor for Piano and Orchestra with renowned pianist Frances Renzi

Renzi has appeared as soloist with many orchestras including those of Dallas, Houston, Toledo, and the New Hampshire Music Festival. Chamber tallies proceeds of Wildflower Show

BY CHRIS MCGREGOR STAFF WRITER

The Salado Chamber of Commerce executive board met April 14 to discuss results from the Wildflower Art Show and plans for the April 29 Chamber Spring Mixer, in addition to receiving addresses from Tourism Director April Allen, Alderman Rick Ashe and Mayor Douglass, among regular business.

Administrative Director Dawn Orange reported that, although final numbers had yet to be tallied, it appears that the Chamber did not meet its goal of $17,000 in revenue from the Art Show. She explained that there were 66 vendors at the 2002 event, compared to 50 at this year's. Skip Blancett suggested that the Chamber consider a different date for the show, saying there are 24 "arttype" shows held the first weekend of April in Texas. "If there is a lesson to learn from this," he said, "it's that we cannot go against Round Top and Canton on the same weekend."

Blancett and Orange did report, however, that the artists were pleased with their treatment, and that Dawn was able to conduct a zip code survey amongst 100 or so visitors to the show. "It will tell us where being planned for Pace we need to market more next year," she explained.

The survey revealed the event was well attended by the Dallas-Ft. Worth, Austin and Waco areas, but sparingly by the San Antonio and Houston areas. "It was definitely a learning experience this year," said Orange. Chamber president Darwin Britt offered his congratulations to the board for the work they put into the show.

Tourism Director April Allen addressed the board concerning the hiring of an intern to assist in the tourism office with tasks such as volunteer coordination and assorted office functions. Allen proposed the intern be paid a $50 per week stipend, the cost being split between the Chamber and the Tourism Office. The internship would last 10 weeks, and would begin, Allen hopes, at the end of the spring semester. She also stated they are looking for someone local to fill the position, and that she is currently searching the Temple College and Mary-Hardin Baylor campuses for applicants. The Chamber voiced its support for the proposal.

Alderman Ashe then spoke to the board in relation to the new playground

Park. He explained that the Village is footing the bill for the majority of the costs, but they are accepting donations to help underwrite the expenses. Ashe said the playground will be on the north side of Pace Park, out of the flood plain, and that it would not impinge on Art Fair booth space. Darwin Britt, however, expressed reservations, saying he was "a little concerned about its location."

Ashe believes, that "worst-case scenario," the 72'x60' playground will be completed by October of this year.

Following Ashe, Mayor Douglass informed the board of the city's efforts assist military dependents at Ft. Hood (those left behind by deployed soldiers).

Douglass believes that because Salado has a relatively low number of military residents, less has been done in regards to helping the dependents than in other communities. She suggested shops stay open late for one evening, specifically for Salado's adopted military group, the One-Four Battalion of the Aviation Brigade at Ft. Hood. She stressed that the families need support in the manner of cash donations for child care, among numerous other concerns. Douglass is currently gathering names of those interested in lending a hand. Call 947-0240 if you would like to help.

In other business, Chris Hale told the board plans are underway for the Chamber Spring Mixer and membership drive, 5:30-7:30 p.m. April 29 at the Salty Water Flatt Flower Farm, located off of Sulphur Wells Road. Royal Street Provision, owned by Hale and Alice Wells, will cater the mixer. Said Hale: "This is a chance for everyone to get together and interact, and get excited about what we're doing."

Doris Denman reported a good turnout for the April 10 Ladies Auxiliary fashion show and that the auxiliary plans to award its annual scholarship in May.

Additionally, Orange said that the last four weeks have been very busy as far as membership is concerned. The Chamber took on 17 applications, all of which were approved by the board. A ribbon cutting is planned for 9 a.m. April 25 at Salado Cleaners.

It was also reported that the Salado Business Association has exceeded its goal of 80 members.

for Chamber members and potential members. Said Chamber President

Darwin Britt: "The mixer is a way to let everyone in the community know that we welcome individof our budget went to civic ual members, as well as businesses." One misconception people might have of the Chamber, said Britt, is that it is purely a business entity. "In 2002, over 25 percent projects. It's a pretty big portion of our budget." A few of those projects include a sound system for the school, a sprinkler system for the green bridge on Main Street and an annual grant to the Civic Center.

The Chamber typically plans four gatherings a year, with the Spring Mixer, the second event of 2003, being the primary membership drive. "We hope our members will bring others interested in becoming a member, but also it allows everyone a chance to interact and socialize with one another," said Britt.

Individual membership to the Chamber of Commerce is $20 a year, and gives the member voting privileges in Chamber elections.

The buffet-style meal is being catered by Royal Street Provision.

Following Stan Kenton around

TUMBLEWEED SMITH

It was a four-day odyssey of artistry in rhythm. I was a freshman at Baylor and my buddy Wes from Chicago had made me a Stan Kenton fan. He had a 45 rpm record changer and every night we put on a stack of Kenton records and listened closely and talked about the music. We knew the names of all the guys in the band.

When Stan Kenton played a concert on the Baylor campus on a Thursday night, Wes and I were at the concert hall early in the afternoon, acting like jazz musicians ourselves. I wore a beret and a Mr. B shirt and an overcoat. I guess we really looked the part because stage hands setting up the stage asked us how we wanted the chairs. We told him where the trombones should go, the trumpets, the saxes and so on.

When Stan and the band members started to arrive, we quickly made ourselves available for any errands Stan the Man might want us to run.

Sure enough, he handed us a twenty dollar bill and asked us to go to Baylor drug and get a sandwich for Candido, the bongo and conga drum player. We were thrilled to be doing something for Stan. We encouraged the person on the grill at Baylor to hurry, that we were on a mission for Stan Kenton. We made it back to the auditorium in record time.

The band was on a Texas Worth Friday night, San Antonio Saturday night and Houston Sunday night. We decided to go to all of his appearances.

In Fort Worth, we went to the Worth Hotel where the band was staying.

In the lobby we visited with Frank Diorio, Kenton's stage manager. He asked us to take him to the Casino, where the band was playing for a dance. We were thrilled beyond words to accommodate him:

Saturday night in San Antonio we sat in a big concert hall and heard the music we loved.

It was around noon on Sunday, while Wes and I were traveling to Houston, that we got behind a Lin-. coln with New York plates. We wondered if that might be Kenton. We passed that Lincoln and sure enough, it was Stan.

He saw us and waved. We were ecstatic.

In Houston we were feeling pretty good and went backstage and visited with Christy, Kenton's June vocalist and other members of the band. By now we were old friends.

I'm a Kenton fan to this day. One of the proudest moments I've ever had was doing an interview with Stan Kenton for Monitor, the weekend show on NBC tour and would be in Fort radio. Ed McMahon, the announcer for Monitor at the time, promoted the interview the week leading up to the weekend broadcast. During NBC Radio News on the hour, the network ran a spot saying something about my interviewing Stan on Monitor next weekend.

> I interviewed him while working in Des Moines, where Stan played a dance. My wife and I went. Hardly anybody danced. They crowded around the stage to hear the music.

The biggest thrill with Stan came when he played a concert in Big Spring. He came over to my house and we sat on our deck and visited. Long. And I put him in the boat, too. I brought him to Rusk and kept him for several months.

He got to bothering people. I'd keep him tied to a tree, but at night he'd get out and walk across people's porches they had just painted.

Then he'd try to get into their chicken houses. I finally gave him away. Ran an ad in the paper for a free alligator. Somebody came and got it." He graduated from

Dialville High School in 1956. Twelve students were in the graduating class. "We took half the seats out of the school bus, put some mattresses back there and went to Florida. Stayed gone three weeks. Only eight of us went. Four didn't go. We had little plays and cake walks to pay for the trip. We made lots of money.

"Our superintendent and his wife went with us. He drove the bus. On the way to Florida we went to New Orleans and stayed three days there, then went on down to Florida and went all over. Rented beach houses and motels. While we were on the road, those three or four mattresses were real comfortable. When we wanted to take a nap, we just laid down and went to sleep.

"We came back through George and Alabama, on into Arkansas. We spent our last night in Henderson. It was just thirty miles from home, but we still had spending money and wanted to spend it. We had lots of fun on our senior trip."

Messenger Quartet in concert at Belton Junior High April 25

Signature Sound and The Messenger Quartet will be in concert 7 p.m. April 25 at the Belton Junior High Auditorium, 400 N. Wall St., Belton. The concert is presented by Cedar Valley Music Minis-

Signature Sounds' mission centers around "Faithfulness" in four specific areas: God, their families, Gospel music, and faithfulness to the people. The group contends that if these four areas are maintained God will honor their efforts, and lives will be changed because of it. This confident resonates through-out the members of Signature Sound. They agree that God called them to make their mark for His sake. It's an opportunity for them to place their signature on a sound that bears their most fervent effort, their passion, and their greatest love.

The Messenger Quartet, mission centers around much the same aspects, They love the Lord and desire to serve Him faithfully. A local group of men put together to minister in harmony, humility, and much humor. In the year and eight months of the groups origin, many doors have opened for them.

Hidden Springs at a custom-built home at Salado Creek, a premier large-acreage residential community, is rapidly gaining a reputation as a place where fine country living saddles up next to the legendary Texas Hill Country around the historic town of Salado.

Hidden Springs has proven to be very popular with country home site buyers, selling out its first unit of properties after a little more than one year on the market - and Unit Two is now selling quickly. New custom homes are being built and several property owners are already becoming residents.

"The short amount of time we have lived here we have thoroughly enjoyed the peace, serenity, and wildlife we encounter on a daily basis," said homeowner Robert West, who with his wife Sharon and two children moved into Hidden Springs in November 2002.

"Life in the Hidden Springs sub-division is a daily retreat from the busy, fast-paced metroplex, which is in close proximity," West added. "We enjoy the privacy that comes from owning wooded acreage, which led us to purchase an additional piece of property adjacent to the one we already own."

This spring, Hidden Springs is marketing Unit Two of the residential community. Unit Two offers a wide selection of two- to 10-acre country home sites, including prime creek-front acreage on Willingham Creek, two miles of which run through Hidden Springs. New home sites start at $32,900, with excellent bank and Texas Veteran's financing available with just a small down payment.

During the Temple Area Builders Association Dream Home Tour weekends, April 26-27 and May 3-4, Hidden Springs is not only offering tours of respected builder Holland Home's model custom homes but also offering an additional $3,000 to $5,000 savings on readyto-build home sites.

Hidden Springs is Hill Country property at its best: There's creek-front and high-elevation properties with level, easy building sites; views that capture your attention and hold your awe; beautiful native oaks, pecan and elm trees with abundant wildlife; a residential community surrounded by big, sprawling ranches - not housing tracts.

A beautifully designed entrance welcomes you to Hidden Springs. Electric-

First time gardener tips Ouestion: I'd like to This is a Hammer

by Samantha Mazzotta

plant a small vegetable garden, but it's my first try. What tips do you have to make gardening foolproof?

Answer: Well, I don't have any expert tips, but I do have a small amount of experience to draw from. The most important advice I can give you is to not worry. Outdoor vegetable gardens do pretty well with a minimum of preparation, lots of sunlight, and just enough water.

That said, there are a few things you should do before running out back and tossing a handful of seeds into the grass (although that would be interesting, too). List what kind of vegetables or herbs you'd like to grow, and sketch what you want the garden to look like. Then, walk around the yard and pick a site that 1) gets sunlight throughout the day, 2) has good drainage (a consistently muddy area

isn't a good sign), 3) doesn't block other activities, 4) is easy to reach with a hose, and 5) can be protected from nibblers like deer and rabbits.

Check your list of desired plants for the amount of sunlight and water they'll need. Find out what climate they grow best in and when the best time of year is to plant them. These factors will determine what exactly you plant, when and in which section of the garden.

Once you've answered those questions, purchase seeds and, if necessary, topsoil. Mark out the perimeter of the garden with stakes and string, and then begin turning the soil over. Dig up the sod to the depth of the shovel blade. If you want to use the sod as part of the soil, break it up well and pull out the weeds. If not, place the sod in a wheelbarrow and either mulch it or save it to replace bald spots on your lawn. Remove rocks and large sticks (but not live tree roots) as you work the soil into a smooth, loose mix. Add purchased topsoil as a final step, spreading it evenly.

Plant the seeds (or plants) according to the directions on the package. At the end of each row, place a stake in the ground with the name of the vegetable written on it in black marker.

Once you're finished, water the entire plot. (Just don't soak the garden to the point where puddles form.) Then, water a couple of times a week, unless it rains. In a very short time, you'll see green results!
