Trustees call bond election for Feb. 4

BY TIM FLEISCHER
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Salado trustees -- on a 6-0 vote -- ordered a Feb. 4, 2006 bond election during a special called meeting Sept. 26.

Voters will have two propositions before them next year. Proposition 1, totaling $15,675,000, will be construction of a new high school on the 50 acres of property at FM 2484 and Williams Dr. with renovations of current academic facilities. Proposition 2, totaling $500,000, will be for renovating the existing football stadium and elementary gymnasium.

The board voted on the motion by Facilities Committee chairman Lynn Renfro that received a second by Jackie Burson. Joining Renfro and Burson in favor were Debby Aldridge, Miriam Ervi, Jeff Kelly and Chris Seaton. Trustee Frank Carlson was absent from the meeting, having suffered a death in his immediate family.

The bond propositions are made with the understanding that Proposition 1 must pass in order for Proposition 2 to be implemented. If Proposition 2 is approved by voters, but Proposition 1 is declined by voters, the board will not issue the $500,000 in bonds for Proposition 2.

The board also set two October community meetings to discuss the bond and answer questions from the public. The first meeting will be at 8 a.m. Oct. 7 at the Salado Civic Center on Main Street.

The second meeting will be 7 p.m. Oct. 10 at Salado High School on Thomas Arnold Rd.

The informal meetings are scheduled for one hour, but administrators and trustees will remain for informal questions afterward.

In calling for the election, trustees also approved early voting times and special early voting opportunities.

Early voting will be 7:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. weekdays Jan. 18-31, 2006 at the Salado Civic Center on Main Street.

Additional early voting times will be the following:

- 7:00-8:30 a.m. Jan. 19 at the Thomas Arnold Elementary school library on Thomas Arnold Rd.

- 5-8 p.m. Jan. 24 at Salado High School on Thomas Arnold Rd.

- 5:30-8:00 p.m. Jan. 26 at Salado Intermediate School commons area on Thomas Arnold Rd.

- 8 a.m.-noon Jan. 28 at the Salado Civic Center on Main St.

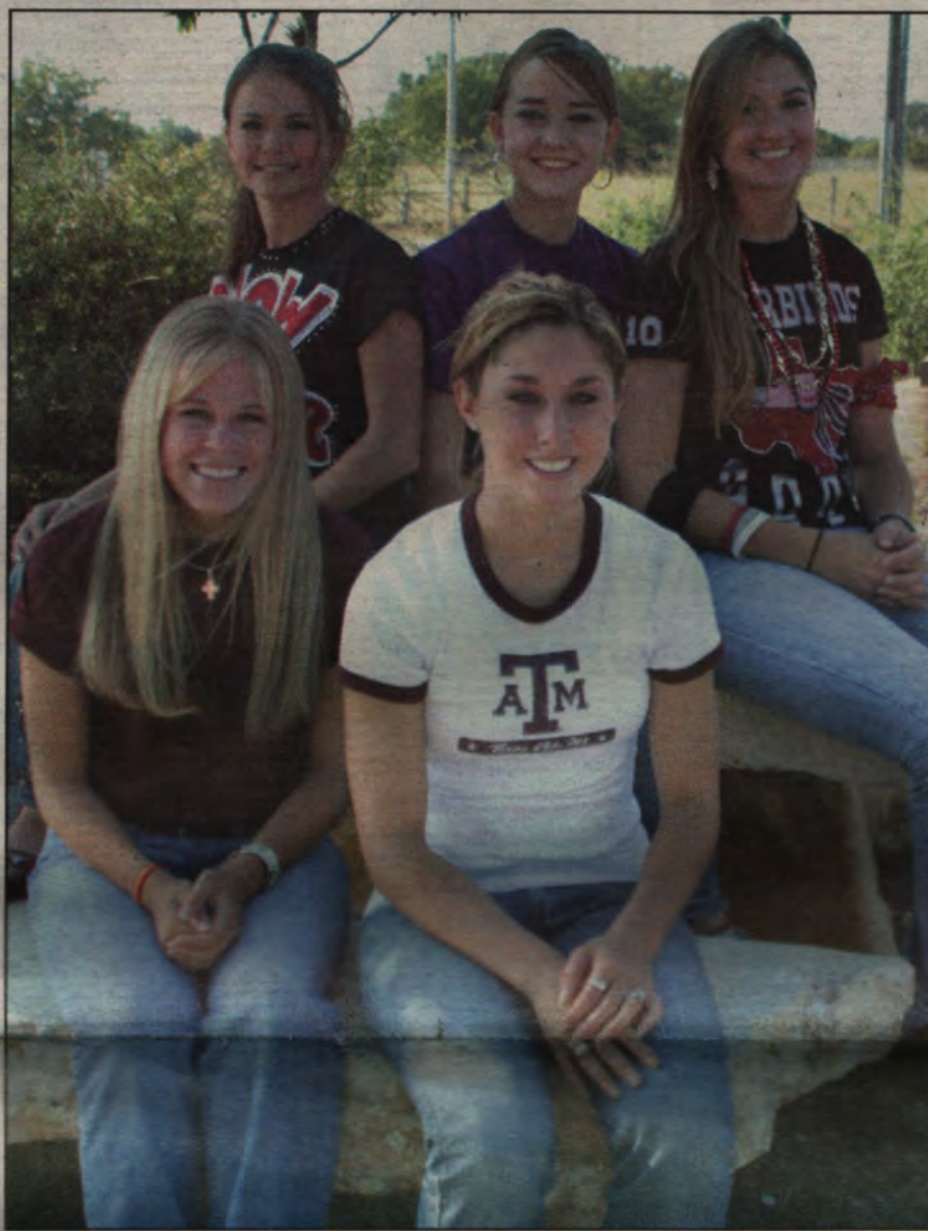

Election day, the polls will be open 7 a.m.-7 p.m. Feb. 4 at the Salado Civic Center, 601 N. Main St. Salado.

To vote in the school bond election, an eligible resident of Salado I.S.D. must register to vote no later than Jan. 5, 2006.

Dr. Robin Battershell reported to trustees before their vote that the architect and construction manager have worked closely with the Facilities Committee and administrators on cost estimates.

"It will be a simple building that the community will be pleased with," Dr. Battershell said, adding that the high school will have an initial classroom capacity of 600 and a core capacity (library, cafeteria, etc.) of 800.

If approved by voters, the superintendent anticipates the project being ready for students by August 2008.

Aldermen to mull annexations, funeral home

Salado aldermen will conduct two public hearings during a special called meeting 6:30 p.m. Sept. 29 at the Salado Municipal Building on Stagecoach Rd.

The board will hear input from the public on the requested annexation of 24 lots of property on O.W. Lowery in Mill Creek. The properties have requested to be brought into the city limits of the Village of Salado.

As a General Law municipality, the Village of Salado cannot annex property at-will, but can only extend its city limits when property owners make the request to the Village.

The board has conducted two public hearings on the matter and will act on the matter following the final public hearing Sept. 29.

The other public hearing will concern a recommendation by the Planning and Zoning board to add "Funeral Home" to the use chart for properties that are zoned Local Retail.

The request was made by Broecker Funeral Home concerning property at 949 W. Village Rd. which also extends to Robertson Rd.

Making the change will avoid "spot zoning" by the Planning and Zoning or the Village of Salado.

The Planning and Zoning recommends the change after having conducted its own public hearing on the matter. The board of aldermen may act on the recommendation after conducting its public hearing on the matter Sept. 29.

In other business, the board of aldermen will discuss the clean-up of Salado Creek, the COPS program and a resolution to appoint a committee to study a possible sewage system. The board will discuss "real property" in closed session.

Bureaucracy at work

Among all the perils facing survivors in New Orleans after Hurricane Katrina, sexual harassment had to be far down the list. But days after the disaster, the Federal Emergency Management Agency had 1,400 firefighters from around the country who had volunteered to help in New Orleans sitting in a conference room in Atlanta undergoing eight hours of training that included a sexual-harassment class. All this before they were allowed even to go to the Gulf Coast area to give out fliers and FEMA's phone number.

Katrina laid bare the peculiar perversities of the bureaucratic mind: its utter commitment to niggling rules, its inability to take risks, its failure to think on the fly. Leadership matters, and in the disaster's initial days, it was hard to tell when FEMA head Michael Brown was doing more harm -- when he tried to do his job, or when he tried to explain on TV how he was doing his job.

In so much of the Katrina response, senselessness ruled the day. Post-9/11 regulations meant FEMA couldn't put evacuees on flights at the New Orleans airport without security screening and federal air marshals on the flights. Apparently, the fear was that terrorists had positioned themselves in New Orleans prior to Katrina so they could pose as bedraggled evacuees. Since the power was down, the X-ray machines and metal detectors didn't work, and it was decided that manual searches would have to suffice. Don't forget to pat down the children!

The president of Jefferson Parish, south of New Orleans, has complained that FEMA turned away three Wal-Mart trailer trucks with water and kept the Coast Guard from delivering 1,000 gallons of diesel fuel. Republican Sen. Trent Lott criticized FEMA for blocking thousands of trailers sitting in Atlanta ready to head to the Mississippi coast. Surely, there were carefully crafted rules and procedures that accounted for these and other decisions to turn away aid.

Of course, the only thing Washington politicians love more than beating up on bureaucracy is creating it. So, after 9/11, all of Washington supported stapling together as many agencies as possible, including FEMA, in the Department of Homeland Security -- such a sprawling bureaucratic monstrosity that it will take a generation to make it work, if ever. But everyone from the president on down pretended he had protected homeland security through the mere act of naming a department after it.

Unfortunately, there is not much that can be done to make bureaucracy less bureaucratic. It makes sense to keep as much authority at the state and local levels as possible, since there officials will at least be more aware of local circumstances (although they can also be scandalously incompetent, as we've seen in New Orleans). Political leaders must constantly ride herd on the bureaucracy to keep it from giving in entirely to its inbred, irrational tendencies. This is where the Bush administration really fell down.

Finally, there is no substitute for old-fashioned individual initiative. A great hero of New Orleans is the 20-year-old who commandeered a school bus and drove evacuees all the way to Houston, arriving before any of the official convoys. The key to his success? He acted without bureaucratic approval.

School trustees set Feb 4 for bond issue that includes new high school and renovated football stadium

The Salado school district's board of trustees took a major step forward last week (on behalf of the nearly 1200 students in our school system) when they voted (6-1) to present two bond propositions to residents of the district. The first proposal includes construction of a new high school and renovation of existing buildings; the second upgrades the current football field plus renovating the elementary gymnasium.

SISD voters will decide on the two measures February 4, 2006. If Prop One is approved - trustees will issue bonds in the amount of $15.675 million. Prop Two - if approved - will require bonds of $500,000.

The bond vote-order stipulates that unless Prop One is approved - the second proposal becomes irrelevant. Other words - Prop Two cannot pass by itself - which makes sense.

The proposed debt service tax rate numbers are being computed by Southwest Securities - the district's financial advisors, and will be determined by the amount of the bonds plus interest; the length (in years) of the bonds; and projected student enrollment.

BOARD DECISION CORRECT

This column, in the Salado Village Voice's final 2004 edition, noted the need for a new high school and urged trustees to call a bond issue in order to keep up with a steadily growing student population.

We believe this to be as true today as it was nine months ago. The problem will not - simply disappear!

What our school board has offered to district residents is a logical two part ballot that not only meets our facility needs for the future, but does so in a cost effective manner.

We commend our school trustees and administrative staff for their work, and urge voters to take an objective look at the propositions. It is further recommended that both proposals be approved.

OVERHEARD:

"A LITTLE OLD LADY"

In the midst of last week's scurrying around to prepare for whatever might happen as a result of Hurricane Rita, this writer visited the grocery store (trying to get ahead of the hoarders), and while standing in the checkout line - overheard some outspoken complaints about our elected officials starting with, but not limited to, the President.

The freewheeling advocate was a 76 year old, well-dressed and well-spoken lady who was taking, not only our political leaders to task, but targeting with equal venom - the oil companies that are - she opined: "gouging Americans daily with prices having no rhyme or reason - only greed!"

Deeply incensed that gasoline prices were expected to soar past five bucks a gallon this month, the "lambasting-lady" nailed oil profiteers, and lawmakers who allow these "greed merchants" to bank billions in profit, at the expense of middle to low income folks (especially those on social security alone) who must shift money from food and medication to buy gasoline.

LADY HAS A POINT

For years we have heard the whimperings of oil and gas lobbyists who pointed fingers of blame at the ecology "freaks" who had (they said) convinced Congress to pass laws that economically prohibit (they claimed) the building of new refineries and storage facilities.

That complaint doesn't carry much weight these days. First of all - the major oil companies are banking billions in excess profits (one outfit gained up to $40 billion a quarter, according to recent newspaper-business reports).

Then add to the recent cash bonanza, the news that our government is willing to waive the more onerous environmental rules in order to "entice" companies to build the needed refineries and storage units. These factors quickly challenge all excuses for not building new facilities.

Admittedly, government's demand that oil reserves be kept on hand would "hurt" the profit side of the oil-gas conglomerate's ledgers, thereby forcing a "no holds barred" fight. If that were to happen, federal officials would need to sit down with the oil-gas folks and have a quiet talk about supply and demand.

Naturally political leaders would need a "big stick" to back up their "soft talk." The "perfect stick" should include two statutes - either an excess profits tax; or a temporary freeze on gasoline and heating oil prices! Or both!

That's heavy stuff, but the public is angry and will not stand for gasoline to hit five, six or seven dollars a gallon without turning against whoever is in the Oval Office and Congress.

President Bush knows this (and top henchman Karl Rove knows it even better), so in order to ease the discomfort GOP congressional-types are feeling about reelection-2006, (as well as controlling Congress), Bush and Company just might have to do something to corral energy prices in particular and "pork" spending in general.

GOPERS WORRIED ABOUT 2006

Republican congressmen seeking reelection in 2006, are also worried about the fact they were elected as self proclaimed "fiscal conservatives" who promised they would slash government spending while promoting tax and national debt cuts.

However, they actually reversed course and in recent years spent historically high amounts of discretionary dollars.

Example of such spending can be found in the 2005 Highway and Energy Bills that gave members billions for home-grown projects that were either useless or wasteful - or both.

And here's a few other numbers that have not been bandied about much, but clearly portray what the Republican controlled Congress has done during the Bush years: Spent twice the amount of discretionary dollars than during the Bill Clinton years; and even more than LBJ and his Great Society adventurers spread around in the '60s.

The mid-year national debt numbers under "Bush's Fiscal Watch" rose from $5.7 to $7.9 trillion. More fiscal problems to overcome in '06.

GOPERS-DEMOS HAUNTED

All that spending will haunt GOPers trying to sell reelection schemes by using the "same-old, same-old" promises to cut taxes and reduce "big gummit".

And don't think the few wise heads left in the Demo party haven't noticed this with amazement. Their problem is what to do about it - using the "same-old, same-old" candidates - each loyal to (and controlled by) powerful independent groups with almost irreconcilable interests.

Existing poverty contributed to Katrina's devastation

By Billy Shore

The heart-wrenching scenes of human suffering witnessed in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina are not only the result of the failure of Lake Pontchartrain's levees, but also the failure of our nation's anti-poverty efforts. The overwhelming majority of the victims are poor, many of them black, and like the dispossessed everywhere, they are inevitably the most vulnerable, and the least able to help themselves.

Ironically, the front pages of many American newspapers that captured the hurricane's initial devastation, also reported that same day on the Census Bureau's most recent study showing that 1.1 million more Americans slipped below the poverty line in 2004, bringing the total number of poor Americans to 37 million. If video of New Orleans and Biloxi sometimes looked like scenes from a developing country that may be why.

The report also showed income inequality near an all time high, with 50 percent of income going to the top 20 percent of households. News coverage of the hurricane made such statistics almost redundant. It was impossible to sit in front of a television in the comfort of a dry, well-stocked home and not grieve for the desperate victims, or for the fact that there are two Americas, more different from each other than ever before.

In the increasingly perilous world in which we live, such division is more disturbing than any challenge imposed by even the greatest extremes of weather.

In the days ahead a debate will rage, and appropriately so, about whether the federal government responded quickly and effectively enough in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina. But as profound as the failings of the Federal Emergency Management Administration may prove to be, they are but the latest in a long sad history of government neglecting those whose voices are too weak or too distant to influence policies, budgets, and priorities. That is a political failing that gets little debate at all, and responsibility is not limited to the current Administration.

When it comes to standing up for expensive and politically unpopular anti-poverty programs like food stamps, housing subsidies, job training, and investments in education, both political parties have sought the easy way out, bowing to pressure from vocal anti-government interests. For the most part, their constituents have let them. But the rising rates of grinding poverty that plague significant pockets of urban and rural America can no more be ignored than the rising waters of the mighty Mississippi River. New Orleans was plagued by high poverty rates of nearly 30 percent before the storm hit. But when network journalists repeatedly break down in tears on the air something is terribly and morally wrong.

Americans are a good and generous people. The Red Cross raised more than $21 million from individuals and businesses in two days following the hurricane.

But good is not the same as wise. Wisdom dictates going beyond charitable emergency relief to support long-term investments in policies and programs that help the poorest become self sufficient. Economic security is the best protection from natural disaster. There weren't many lawyers, doctors, architects, or venture capitalists sleeping on cots at the Superdome.

Nature's awesome power will often remain beyond our control. But we can control who suffers in the path of nature's mercy. That is a choice societies make. One couldn't watch distraught New Orleans mothers, desperate to find water for their dehydrated children, or the elderly cast adrift without medicines or support, without questioning the choices we've made so far. When such incongruent suffering in a nation as blessed as ours becomes intolerable, we may begin to focus not only on the availability of emergency supplies, but on the availability of opportunity for all to share in the American dream.

Shore is the founder and executive director of Share Our Strength, founded in 1984 in response to the Ethiopian famine and subsequently renewed concern about hunger in the U.S.

Tax wolf in sheep's clothing

To the Editor:

In 2001 a proposition was placed as a referendum to voters that developed the Texas Mobility Fund. Texans voted for "mobility" and Prop 15 became a constitutional amendment. Only later we found it was the first "Tax Wolf in sheep's clothing."

The ballot language of Proposition 15 did not openly and accurately inform voters that the Perry-motivated special-interest plan would allow the Trans Texas Corridor, or our public highways to be privatized and tolled so corporations can profit from what is already ours.

2005: PROPOSITION 1

Currently, the "Tax Wolf" is "rearing its ugly head" again with the Proposition 1 rail fund. It's a similarly smoke-screen voter trick as was Prop 15, except this time it's after more of our tax dollars by subsidizing private corporations rail. Proposition 1 is an open-ended corporate subsidy scheme --- a blank check. Taxpayers will pay unlimited tax dollars to move private corporation rail lines into Gov. Perry's Trans Texas Corridor, and this after the governor had promised Texans that no public funds would be used.

And, it gets worse. Our state debt commitment also will be open-ended, like a credit card with no ceiling, for state bonds that may be issued from this new fund. In a veiled power-play and further by amending the Constitution to authorize the creation of this fund, the state is committing its taxpayers to massive debt for generations. While private special interest corporations profit, taxpaying families will pay more as they will help fund the largest land grab in Texas history --- Perry's Trans Texas Corridor. The Corridor is in direct opposition to the platform of the Republican Party of Texas.

Your Voice

Letters to the Editor

Proposition 9 allows non-elected, unaccountable Tolling Authority board members extended term limits. Under the proposal, current two-year term limits would expand to six years for appointed members of Perry's Regional Mobility Authorities (RMAs). These new and powerful special interest bureaucracies will have the authority to privatize and toll our public highways, and without urgently needed accountability, they will set the toll rates for roads we've already paid for with tax dollars!

Texas Comptroller Carole Keeton Strayhorn put out a comprehensive scathing report that shows how RMA's create "double taxation without accountability" and how the rampant loose management practices within these new RMA's cost Texas families more of their tax dollars. Not surprisingly, Strayhorn also found motives of conflicts of interest, favoritism and self-profiteering as board members gave contracts (without bids) to their friends and their own companies. Gov. Perry's RMA boards must be required to abide by the standard provided in the Constitution that limits the terms of members of such boards to two years. The reason for Proposition 9 is to ensure that RMA members will remain pro-toll oriented for the longer period of time, so that the governor and his tolling special interests gain the most from this sleight-of-hand power-play.

The open-ended language of Props 1 and 9 appears to adhere to an integrity standard, but of course they doesn't mention the Trans Texas Corridor, unlimited taxes, lack of accountability and double-tax issues. "Tax Wolves" are not what they appear to be. They are not open and honest about their intentions; they are riddled with special interest obscurities.

We must stop the "Tax Wolf" at the next election during early voting and on Nov. 8. Sayno to Prop 1 and 9. Call our TexasTollParty.com today at 512.371.9926 to find out how Urban and Rural Texans can work together to help stop the Tax Wolf. Hiding the truth about CAFTA

Jim Hightower

If an ideologically incorrect study is done inside the Bush regime, does it make a noise?

Not if the White House can squelch it, which is exactly what they've tried to do to a report about labor abuses in Central America. For more than a year, the Department of Labor has fought ferociously to block the release of a study showing that working conditions in six Latin American nations are abysmal and that government officials in the region do little to enforce labor protections.

These findings do not fit with the president's ideological insistence that workers worldwide can trust global corporatization to improve their lives.

The 400-page report was particularly inconvenient and untimely for the administration, because it had been pushing hard this year to ram another glob of globaloney called "CAFTA" down our throats. CAFTA - the Central American Free Trade Agreement - was this summer's number one legislative priority for Mr. Bush's global corporate backers, and the last thing they wanted was documentation that their corporate ilk are already exploiting, injuring and otherwise abusing workers in the CAFTA region.

In hilarious irony, the study in question was commissioned by - guess who - Mr. Bush's own Labor Department! It contracted with the International Labor Rights Fund to do the study - but when the results were not what the sponsors wanted to hear, they impounded the report, forbade the Labor Rights Fund from publishing it, and even denied repeated requests by members of Congress to review it.

Finally, after Rep. Sandy Levin filed a freedom-of-information action to force the release of the tax-paid study, the Labor Department relented - but not before trying to taint its own report, blasting it as "rife with unsubstantiated and unverifiable claims."

To see the report yourself, go to: www.house.gov/levin.

Troy's Troll finds home under bridge

PALS will dedicate new statue on Salado's Main Street Oct. 4

Salado artist Troy Kelley and the Public Arts League of Salado will dedicate the statue "Troll and Billy Goat Gruff" at 10 a.m. Oct. 4 at the Walking Bridge on Main Street.

More than six years ago, Kelley was given permission by the Texas Department of Transportation to place the sculpture of the Troll and Billy Goat Gruff at the Walking Bridge, which spans Campbell's Branch on Salado's North Main Street.

Since then, Kelley and supporters, such as the Public Arts League of Salado (PALS), have been raising money for the casting of the statue.

PALS predominantly funded the casting of the statue, and is acting as hosts for the statue dedication. The project also received funds from many individuals and from a Village of Salado Hotel/Motel grant.

The Troll and Billy Goat Gruff statue will join other works of art that Kelley has placed throughout the village of Salado.

Among those are - most famously -- Si-rena, in the springs of Salado Creek downtown and "Late Again" at the entrance of the Salado

Civic Center on Main. Late Again was funded by Salado native Morris Foster, who attended school in the old red building that no serves as the Salado Civic Center.

Other works you may find in Salado by Kelley include a mischievous tree fairy in the canopy of branches at the walking bridge and a puma in the branches above Uncommon Grounds on Main Street.

The public is invited to celebrate in the dedication of this statue by Troy Kelley.

Bell County Blaze wins Round Rock tourney

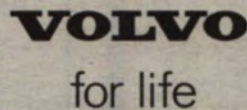

The Bell County Blaze (a "10 & Under" select baseball team) won first place in Round Rock's annual USSSA "Fall Classic" baseball tournament Sept. 17-18 in the 10U Major classification.

The Blaze started out with a loss to the Sam Bass Longhorns, a top three nationally-ranked team, by a score of 12-7, then went on to re-group in a double-header against the Austin Hurricanes by winning scores of 9-6 and 12-2.

Eventually, the Blaze met up against the Longhorns again in the Championship game and this time pulled it together to win by a score of 9-7.

Outstanding pitching from Casey Frazier, Drew VanWinkle, and Andrew Paysse proved to be the difference this tournament. Consistent power hitting came from Mason Marinik, Mark Herrington, Braden Pearson, and Chase Cryer in critical situations throughout the tournament, coaches said.

Eagles blast Yeguas 44-0

Hurricane Rita brought quite a bit of uncertainty to the Salado Somerville district tilt. Clogged roads ferrying Gulf Coast evacuees to Central Texas towns compelled the school's officials to eventually move the game to a Monday night, after the prospect of playing on a Thursday became an impossibility.

But when the two teams finally did take the field Sept. 26 in Somerville, there was little debate as to which club was in control, with the Eagles (3-1) handing the host Yeguas (0-4) a lopsided 44-0 district defeat.

And after being abused in week one - surrendering 55 points to a powerhouse Liberty Hill offense - the rangy, ball-hawking Salado Eagles defense asserted itself from the start.

For the entire game, Somerville signalcaller Josh Vela was harassed and frustrated by the stingy Salado defense, connecting on only 4-14 passing for 68 yards and one pick. The majority of those yards came on one 55-yard hookup with Michael Pittman.

It bears mentioning at this point that the passing game was Somerville's bright spot.

For Salado showed in its recent win over Troy that it can, indeed, stymie a strong running game. That fact was hammered home for a second consecutive contest, as Somerville managed a meager three yards rushing on 23 carries - a miniscule .13 yards per rush average - and accumulated a paltry 71 yards of total offense on the night.

The Wesley Ruth-led Eagle offense, for its part, demonstrated that it can be as big a game-changing force as the defense. The double-threat senior quarterback led Salado to a touchdown on the Eagles' first possession of the game, marching the team down the field and scoring himself on a nine-yard kepper. Travis Kemp booted the point after to put Salado up 7-0.

As it turned out, that would be all the scoring necessary, but the Eagle offense, having its way with Somerville, put up 28 more points in the second quarter to put the game far out of reach.

In that period alone, Blake Newman hauled in a 39-yard TD reception from Ruth, followed by consecutive TD runs by tailback Tucker Wilhite (of 10 and 50 yards, respectively), and a 16-yard, Wes Ruth-to-Stephen Fry touchdown score.

With successful PAT's completing all first half scoring drives, Salado held a comfortable 35-0 lead after two quarters.

The second half of play was punctuated by the Salado defense recording a safety, when defensive end Ethan Williams chased down a hapless Vela in the end zone in the third quarter. The game's scoring was brought to a close when Alonso Galvan plunged into the end zone from one yard out in the fourth, followed by Kemp's sixth PAT of the game.

Wilhite was the pacesetter on the ground for the ground for Salado, rushing 15 times for 131 yards and two scores. Ruth was 11-66 rushing with one TD and 8-14 for 91 yards and two scores through the air.

Looking Ahead

The scheduling fallout caused by Hurricane Rita will not continue into this week. After some discussion it was decided that Salado's homecoming game versus Lago Vista will be played at its normal time 7:30 p.m. Sept. 30, rather than on Oct. 1.

The Vikings, coached by Salado alum Allen Haire, enter the game enjoying by far their best start since their program was jumpstarted a few years ago. They defeated a punchless Rogers squad last week 22-16 to move to 4-0 on the year and 1-0 in district.

The Vikings lack a big play offense, instead relying on the pass-run threat of their quarterback to make plays. The Lago Vista defense is bolstered by three large down linemen; containing them will be Salado's focus.

Lady Eagles drop to 1-4 in district

Due to scheduling conflicts brought on by the threat of Hurricane Rita, the Lady Eagles volleyballers got in just one match last week, that coming Sept. 20 in Lexington.

Having struggled with mental mistakes at various points throughout the season, Salado was once again done in by inconsistency, as the Lady Eagles were defeated by Lexington by the final of 25-18, 26-24 and 25-22.

"I definitely believe we were the better team, but our lack of mental toughness cost us the match," said Coach Bree Holz, whose team has been in a position to win most every much this season, but dropped to 11-14 after the loss. "We started playing too safe at critical times in the match, and Lexington took advantage of that."

Nichole Weatherly closed out the match with 10 kills, while teammate Kate Marshall had nine kills and two blocks. Molly Rooney tallied six kills, six digs and two blocks, Shae Janda had 10 assists, LeeAnne Ingalsbe had nine digs and Larissa Ingalsbe put together nine assists.

With a 1-4 district

mark, the Lady Eagles will host Lexington Sept. 30, with freshmen games beginning at 5 p.m. On Oct. 4, the teams will play host to Rogers, with games again beginning at 5 p.m.

Church of Christ to host

"No Debt, No Sweat" seminar

The Salado Church of Christ will host the biblically-based financial seminar, "No Debt, No Sweat," in four sessions over two nights, Oct. 1 and 2 at the church's Activity Center.

Steve Diggs, a minister at the Church of Christ in Antioch, TN - who also spent three decades as a business owner, business professor and financial counselor - believes that in these days of too-easy credit, people get into trouble before they even realize it. The result on one's family and spiritual life can be disastrous, he contends.

Diggs believes getting off to the right start financially is the key, therefore he will be teaching issues like "The A-B-C's of Christian Money Management," as well as looking at the dangers of credit, how to create a successful spending plan, and how to retire with dignity.

With a mixture of humor and an appeal to the "wisdom of the Scriptures," Diggs should interest all those would like to practice Christian stewardship and fiscal responsibility.

This event is free and open to the public. Workbooks will be provided so that attendees may take home and review all the key issues addressed.

The first session begins 6 p.m. Oct. 1, to be followed by session two at 7:30 p.m. The Oct. 2 sessions will begin at 6:30 p.m.

Valley Arts Show and Sale returns for 2nd year

Following the success of Valley Arts Studio's first Photography Show and Sale, which was held last November at Royal Street Provision, Belton resident M.L. Bolton returns to Salado Oct. 1 and 2 for his second photography event.

While last year's show - the first ever for Bolton - was a solo effort, the October show and sale will feature Bolton, along with Austin photographer Shauna Mora and M.L.'s son, Will Bolton, of Dallas. The three will give attendees the opportunity to view a diverse and compelling array of photographs from three stylistically different - yet altogether original - photographers.

Open and free to the public, the show and sale will begin with a 6-9 p.m. Oct. 1 reception at Royal Street Provision, where light refreshments and wine and cheese will be served. The following day, from 2-5 p.m., the show and sale will be held.

As a free lance, commercial photographer, the subject matter of M.L. Bolton's photographic library is both extensive and eclectic.

His work in pursuing both private and commercial clients has taken him from some of the most beautiful places in America - such as the wilds of Alaska and the Grand Canyon - to the back streets of rural Texas towns.

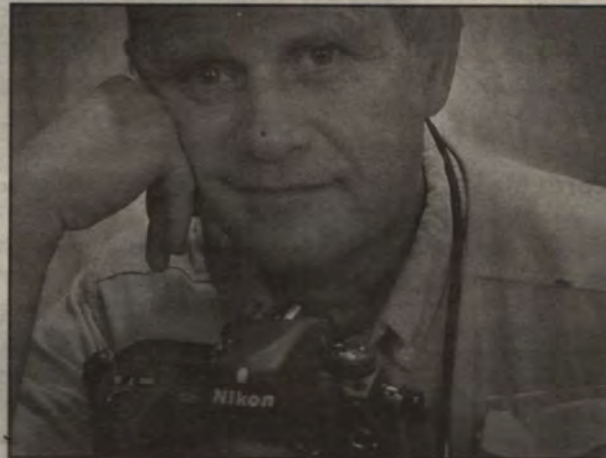

Originally a film photographer, he now uses digital equipment exclusively. His current portfolio includes images of majestic landscapes from the Grand Canyon in northern Arizona to the coastal mountain ranges in southeastern Alaska, and covers the spectrum from florals and still life, to portraits of everyday people. All of his images to be featured at the show and sale were taken by Bolton in the past year. His pursuit of knowledge and his use of cutting-edge technology not only help him to obtain the highest photographic quality possible, but also help to achieve his main goal of touching the human spirit and heart with each image.

All the while, Bolton holds true to his belief that art and photography should be within reach of everyone. With that premise in mind, Bolton makes his prints available for as little as $15, and almost all can be had for under $30.

Bolton is a member of the Kodak Professional Group, the Texas Photographic Society and the Texas Professional Photographers Association.

At the age of 23, Will Bolton has already established himself as a well-respected commercial graphic designer and photographer. His photographic style has been described as refreshing, creative and contemporary. Although he shoots both film and digital cameras, his present work focuses on his digital photography.

M.L. Bolton (above) along with Shauna Mora, of Austin, and Will Bolton, of Dallas, will participate in the second annual Valley Arts Studio Show and Sale Oct. 1 and 2 at Salado's Royal Street Provision.

His work consists primarily of portrait, commercial and macro-photography, as well as graphic art. Because he began working in digital design and editing in his early teens, his Photoshop skills are very evident in his photographic art images. In fact, at age 13 Will had already founded his own web design business.

Will, formerly a professional musician, is currently a graphic designer and staff photographer for Russell Publishing Group in Dallas, publisher of several national media publications.

He has recently been promoted to the position of art director for their flagship magazine, Nu-Image. Like his father, he has not totally abandoned music, as he occasionally does session work in the Dallas area.

SHOW AND SALE — FROM 1B

Shauna Mora began taking photographs in her early teens, and her love for the art and science of photography has grown ever since. Her primary photographic medium is 35mm film, and oil of her digital imaging is derived from scanned negatives.

Although she shoots many of her subjects in color film, her true passions, she says, is black and white photography. Years of hard work and earned knowledge have resulted in her remarkable attention to detail.

From the initial exposure through the creative printing processes, Mora's eye for composition and demand for the highest quality are seen in every image she creates.

Her work focuses primarily on wedding, portrait and fine art photography, as well as digital imaging and design. Of the three artists, Mora is the most traditional in her techniques.

A recipient of many photography awards, Mora is currently completing her photography degree from Austin Community College. She is a member of the Texas Professional Photographers Association, and lives and works in Austin with her husband Carlos, and their newborn son, Izaak.

For more information about the show and sale, contact Royal Street Provision at 947-3350 or visit www.valleyartsstudio.com.

The Brown Ranch has hummingbirds

The Hummer House is on Dan Brown's ranch at Christoval. It's been in his family since 1927. Hummingbirds have been fed there for 44 years, resulting in the largest concentration of hummingbirds in the state. Dan is considered an expert on hummingbirds and gives lectures on their migrating and nesting habits.

From April until August Dan feeds the hummers four gallons of sugar water a day with a mixture of one cup of sugar to three cups of water (that nearly resembles the sugar content in nectar). Last year he used 825 pounds of sugar feeding the birds. He feeds other types of birds, too. When we were there we saw several painted buntings, a striking creature with bright green, yellow and pink feathers. Dan puts about ten pounds of white millet a day for the buntings and cardinals.

He has an observation room with a wall of windows for viewing the hummingbirds. Large feeders spaced six feet apart are just outside the windows. His ranch is open to the public and has some guest rooms for overnight visitors. The observation room and cottages are in a pecan and oak thicket, which is home to turkey and deer. Dan keeps them coming around by feeding them 45 tons of corn a year.

stay here all winter."

Dan works with the parks and wildlife department on a bird-banding program. "We've banded over 21,000 birds here in the last 10 years representing 123 species. We have banded over 2,000 painted buntings at this location."

He has banded six species of hummingbirds. "The Rubythroats come in the spring, but they don't stay long. This is the largest feeding and nesting site of Black Chins in Texas. We do have Calliope and Rufus, which stay with me all winter."

Dan says most people think hummingbirds leave in the fall, but that's not so. "Keep a feeder up and keep it fresh and you'll have some birds in the winter-time."

"It's a work of love and enjoyment and it's never ending," says Dan. "This all got started 44 years ago with one hummingbird feeder. That year ended with six feeders and it's grown every year since then."

He says the number of birds has increased every year except one when a hailstorm destroyed about 50 percent of the population in 10 minutes.

He built his first cottage in 1995, then built the observation room.

He's in the process of building two more guest rooms, one for families and one for anniversaries or honeymoons. Reservations are recommended. Call 325 255-2254. Adults pay $5 to get in the observation room. Children are admitted free of charge.

"I'm nearly booked solid all summer and nearly so in the wintertime. A lot of people want to see the deer and the turkey apart from the hummingbirds but we'll have a lot of other birds coming in that

The General Store Collection

The Salado Sawmill, an artisan's workshop and gallery, carries a unique line of custom furniture, "The General Store Collection." This bold and chunky design contains many elements of the furnishings your would have found in stores and homes at the turn of the last century. The bead-board detailing and glass front door take you back to a simpler time. Bob Pascoe, owner of The Salado Sawmill, has created several pieces in this line.

Pascoe uses traditional construction techniques, using only solid woods. "There is no press board or fiber board in my work," Pascoe says. "I use mortise and tenon glue joints and a minimum of mechanical fasteners." The General Store design is very flexible, allowing for the creation of cabinet bases, breakfronts, tables, bookcases and the library table pictured here. The entire collection can be seen at saladosawmill.com/generalstore.html.

Pascoe says he can design to your specification. "Just bring in a picture or sketch of something you're interested in and your specific requirements, like dimensions and wood type. I'll provide you with a bid and we can go from there. Pascoe has several other lines, including Arts and Crafts and Country Pine.

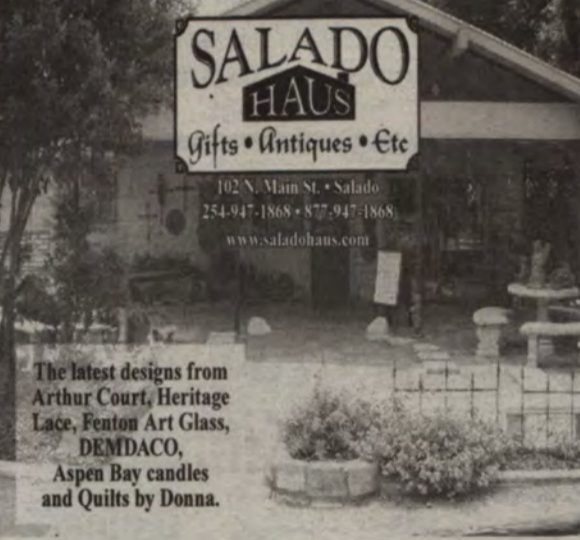

The Sawmill, a division of XtraWorX, LLC, is located at 409 Salado Plaza at the entrance to Mill Creek in Salado.

Cattlemen's Ball benefits students like Jennings

The Salado Education Foundation has awarded many scholarships to deserving Salado students since its inception. One of the more recent was Matt Jennings, who in 2005 received a $2,000 scholarship from the foundation.

It is because of fund-raising events such as the upcoming Chisholm Trail Cattlemen's Ball that the SEF is able to continue its work. This year's Cattlemen's Ball will be held 6 p.m. Oct. 22 at Salado's Tenroc Ranch. Tickets are on sale at the Salado ISD central office, 947-5479, or at Bill Bartlett Real Estate, 947-5050.

Matt moved to Salado with his family as he was entering sixth grade. Since his father was a chaplain in the Army, Salado became Matt's sixth home. Matt has also lived in New Jersey, Kansas, Killeen, Seoul, South Korea and Washington, D.C. In addition, he has visited Japan, Guam, Puerto Rico and Hawaii.

Jennings was a three-year member of the SHS basketball team. In his senior year, team earned a berth in the state playoffs (a first for Salado boys' basketball). Matt was selected for the all-district team and for the Academic All-State team.

In addition to basketball, Matt was a member of the state qualifying boys' 2005 golf team as well as serving as class treasurer. He was a member of the National Honor Society and the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

At the present, Matt is enrolled at Texas A&M and Blinn College. Because of the dual credit Salado I.S.D. offers, Matt will be a sophomore at the end of the fall semester. He is majoring in Chemical Engineering.

'See the Magic' during Village Artists' show Oct. 1

The Salado Village Artists will hold a "See the Magic" Art Show, 9:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Oct. 1 in the Village Artists Building, behind the Salado Civic Center.

This not-quite-annual juried art show is free and open to the public. Members of the art club will be showing their best works, with honors such as best painter, stitcher, photographer, or sculptor up for grabs. Other categories include mixed media, drawing, and stamping.

The Art Show committee consists of Mardie Banard, Joan Hoffman, Debbie Martin, and Jerry Goodman. They have announced that the submitted works will be displayed and judged on Sept. 30.

The show will be judged by three qualified judges whose names are not released to the public, and prizes of cash and ribbons will be awarded during a private reception for the art club members 4-6 p.m. Sept. 30.

This is only the fifth fully juried show the Village Artists have had since their organization in the Village 1983. They have been part of activities like teen classes, festivals, and UIL competitions.

The group has contributed their talents to causes like the Lighthouse Foster Children group, Quilts for Linus, and the many public auctions held in the Village to benefit Pals, the Library, and the Salado Independent School District.

Fourth grade gifted and talented students are organizing a City wide Garage Sale.

Citywidegaragesale Oct. 1 benefits hurricane victims

Thomas Arnold Elementary fourth grade gifted and talented students, along with the school's student body, are organizing a Citywide Garage Sale to be held 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Oct. 1 in the SISD parking lot.

The proceeds from the sale will benefit local Hurricane Katrina and Rita victims.

Anyone wishing to donate items for the sale should drop them off at the elementary school 3-5 p.m. Sept. 30 or 7-8 a.m. Oct. 1.

Is chlorine bleach bad for the environment?

Dear EarthTalk: Is the chlorine bleach used for whitening clothes bad for the environment? And if so, what are some safe alternatives? --Nancy Potter, via e-mail

More than 80 percent of American households use chlorine bleach to whiten their clothes and clean inside their homes, but most consumers don't realize that the use of this seemingly innocuous cleaning additive could be polluting their home as well as the great outdoors.

"The fumes of cleaners containing a high concentration of chlorine when breathed in can irritate the lungs and be particularly dangerous for people who suffer from heart conditions or chronic respiratory problems such as asthma or emphysema," says Patty Avey, editor of SmartLivingNews. "When the fumes are emitted in small, poorly ventilated rooms such as the bathroom, the risks are increased," she adds.

Another immediate risk of having chlorine bleach around the house is accidental ingestion by little ones--poison control centers across the country receive about 20,000 such calls each year. Also, combining chlorine bleach with ammonia and other acids can cause deadly fumes.

Meanwhile, though, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) maintains that there is no danger in using chlorine bleach around the house, claiming that the amount of chlorine is too low to warrant serious concern. But the agency does regulate the use of chlorine for industrial purposes, and confirms links between exposed workers and lung irritation.

EARTH TALK

Questions & Answers
About Our Environment

Chlorine bonds with other chemicals in the wastewater stream to form carcinogenic "organochlorines" (such as dioxin) that contaminate drinking water supplies, among other risks.

Luckily, healthy and environmentally safe alternatives to chlorine bleach abound. Half a cup of hydrogen peroxide can work well as a bleach alternative when diluted with warm water prior to going in the wash load.

But before spending a fortune on bleach alternatives, consumers should see if hard water might be causing their clothes to look gray and dingy from soap scum and mineral deposit build-up. If you do have hard water, simply add enough baking soda to the laundry to make the wash water feel slippery to the touch and see if that doesn't whiten whites and brighten colors.

Did Exxon ever pay its Valdez fines

Dear EarthTalk: Is it true that Exxon never paid the fines that were to help the local Alaskan fishing communities that were harmed by the 1989 Valdez oil spill? -- Marcy Damon, via e-mail

EARTH TALK

Questions & Answers About Our Environment

The $5 billion in civil charges levied against Exxon by a federal court in 1994 to cover ecological restoration for the Valdez oil spill--at the time, the largest punitive damage award in history--is still in legal limbo in appeals court 16 years later. But the company has spent around $3.5 billion on clean-up efforts, on compensation to affected local residents, and on settlements with Alaska and the federal government to underwrite environmental studies and conservation programs in and around Prince William Sound.

Critics of Exxon charge that the company has used the appeals system to delay payment of the disputed additional $5 billion. "Exxon threw up so many obstacles after the initial $5 billion judgment that the case generated more than 7,700 docket entries," reported journalist Andrew Gumbel in the UK-based Independent in March 2004 at the time of the 15th anniversary of the spill.

Some charge that Exxon may actually be profiting some $800 million per year from the delay, "because of the difference between the interest rate being charged by the courts and the much higher rate it enjoyed through its own internal financing systems," said Gumbel.

"This spill continues to haunt [us] to this day in the form of socioeconomic trauma from lingering damages to our environment and fisheries, physical trauma from injured health, and emotional trauma from Exxon's ridiculous court delays," says Riki Ott, a former Prince William Sound commercial fisherwoman who founded the Alaska Forum for Environmental Responsibility soon after the spill. "Even $5 billion won't bring justice, but it will go a long way toward bringing closure to this sorry event."

For its part, the company (now ExxonMobil) insists it has paid the price for the accident and should be allowed to forego the remaining assessed damages entirely. In 2001, the Ninth Circuit Federal Court of Appeals did just that, concluding that the charges were "excessive"--but this reversal was soon overturned itself on another appeal by environmental organizations. According to a 2004 press release, the company claims that the "punitive damages suggested...are not a debt that is owed" but instead represent "a windfall in excess of the amount the jury found necessary to compensate the plaintiffs for their losses."

Regardless of whether or not ExxonMobil ever pays the additional damages, it will continue to face the added costs of implementing safety measures--such as equipping all of its oil tankers with double hulls to prevent future accidents. Meanwhile, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has worked with the company, and the industry as a whole, on coordinating and implementing expensive spill response plans to contain leaked oil and minimize ecological effects in all American waters.
