

County launches app to determine voting wait times

With early voting underway in political party primaries, the Bell County Elections Department has launched a new app designed to help voters predict wait times at the polls.

The new app is live now at bellcountytexas.com/voting. It was developed by the Bell County Technology Services Department to work on either a computer or on a mobile device. The app displays the estimated wait time at each of the county's six early voting locations. Voters can also enter their location to find the nearest voting site.

While the front page of the app offers the estimated wait time for each site, users can drill down into the details of each site by clicking on them. The most important detail for users to check is the time of the "Last Update" to the site's information.

The APP showed that the Salado voting location on Feb. 15 had no waiting time.

"The Election Judges at each location are tasked with keeping the app updated,"

Scan the QR code to launch the voter APP.

Interim Elections Administrator Shay Luedeke said. "As this is a new resource for us, there may be a learning curve for some of our sites."

Luedeke has already held one training for election workers, during which they received training on the app. Another two trainings are planned before Election Day on March 1.

"For that reason, I would encourage voters to check how recently a wait time was updated before going to the location and being surprised by a long line," Luedeke said.

The app was developed by the Bell County Technology Services Department to function equally well on either a computer or on a cell phone.

User can scan the QR code with their phone camera to access the app.

Early voting began on Feb. 14 in political party primary races. Voters can cast their ballots at any Early Voting location during Early Voting and at any polling place Election Day March 1.

Early voting hours are:
Feb. 14-18, 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Feb. 19, 7 a.m.-7 p.m.
Feb. 20, noon-5 p.m.
Feb. 22-25: 7 a.m.-7 p.m.

Salado early voting location is Salado Church of Christ Activities Center, 225 N. Church St. This is also the polling location for March 1 Election Day.

Voters can cast ballots at any early voting location. For early voting locations, visit https://www.bellcountytexas.com/departments/elections/early_voting.php

Mayor: growth is here!

By TIM FLEISCHER
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

"It's amazing," Mayor Michael Coggin told the Salado Ladies Community League last week. "There are so many balls in the air and so few of us to keep them up in the air."

Coggin gave the group a "Salado 360" tour of new developments and changes coming to the Village. He pointed out that this growth has to come through the Village for subdivision approval if it is in the limits or the Extra Territorial Jurisdiction (ETJ) of the Village.

For example, the day before, the Board of Aldermen approved a proposed concept plan for Salado Center, Phase I, a mixed use development at the northwest corner of FM 2484 and I-35.

The concept plan for the portion within the Village ETJ (some is in the ETJ of Belton) includes 5.87 acres with 9 commercial lots to allow for construction of a large convenience store with outlying restaurant and retail parcels. The development will be served by its own wastewater treatment plant. The plant is certified for up to 500,000 gallons per day, according to Coggin, but the initial plant has 25,000 gallons per day capacity.

Coggin said that the Salado Center will include senior living in one of its phases.

The senior living, he said, will include housing from minimal assistance to a full nursing care facility.

Further west and across FM 2484 is a development that has been in contact with the Village to be brought into the city limits in order to tie in to the sewer. This development, Coggin said, would include up to 250 homes. Currently, the developer is cutting roads for a 50-home-site phase of the development.

Carothers Brothers has been working on infrastructure for the Eagles Heights development, which will include commercial on West Village Rd. "I've been told that all of those lots (commercial) have been spoken for," Coggin said.

The residential portion of the Eagle Heights development will have 180 single family homes when fully developed.

To address the growth on the west side of I-35, the Village is developing a concept plan in partnership with Bell County and Salado ISD for expansion and improvements to West Village Rd.

With the rapid growth in Williamson County and Jarrell, Coggin said that the Village is going to annex as much as it can along I-35 south to the rest areas. "Jarrell is coming as far up the interstate as they can," he said.

Coggin spoke about the Salado Airport project, which will have hangar/apartments for those who want to live above their planes. According to the developer's website, only 17 lots of the 77 platted are available. The runway has been paved and striped and a hanger has been built.

Adjacent to the Salado Airport is Sanctuary, a development that Coggin has struggled with since being elected to the board of aldermen and then being elected Mayor in Nov. 2020.

"We are working to try to change this agreement," he told the group. "It is completely in favor of the developer with little benefit to the Village."

Plans for Waters Edge apartment complex and for a residential development of 180+ single family homes on Sanctuary have already been approved. Work has begun on the infrastructure of those two phases of Sanctuary.

"We don't want any more apartments north of FM 2268," he said of Sanctuary.

Coggin said that he expects a proposed plat for the commercial development of Sanctuary south of FM 2268 at I-35 in the coming weeks. He said it will have a large retail component with smaller outlying lots for restaurants and retail.

Village pursues making Salado "Music Friendly"

The Village of Salado is taking on an effort to become a Music Friendly Community. There are currently more than 20 Texas cities registered with the Governor's Office as Music Friendly Communities.

Representatives from the Governor's Texas Music Office will be on hand for a kick-off community workshop 6 p.m. Feb. 28 at the Village Municipal Building, 301 N., Stagecoach Rd.

The Music Office Staff will talk to attendees about the steps and benefits of getting Salado recognized as a music-friendly community.

The process to become recognized as a Music Friendly Community is the following:

1. Host a Texas Music Office sponsored Music Friendly Community workshop.

2. Establish a Music Office/Liaison within a division of city government (city office, economic development corporation, CVB/destination tourism office) that will be responsible for monthly reports concerning the progress of local music industry development programs.

3. Register with the Texas Music Office's Texas Music Industry Directory. The liaison's organization also signs a mutually agreed upon Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) that creates a working arrangement for the sharing of Music Directory data, and establishes protocols for keeping the directory information up to date.

4. Demonstration of partnerships with the community's music-related 501c3 nonprofits in order to foster community development.

5. Collaboration with music education programs, including area college or university music schools.

6. Create an advisory board made up of local music community industry stakeholders.

If you are interested in taking part in this effort, visit saladotx.gov to RSVP for the Feb. 28 meeting.

For more information, call 254-947-5060.

Spotify Shouldn't Accept Cancelers' Premises

There have been many unpleasant paid jobs throughout history, from executioner to leech collector to nitpicker. Now, to this litany of gruesome and onerous work, must be added being employed by Spotify in the 21st century.

The CEO of the streaming company, besieged by a highly motivated cancellation mob out for podcaster Joe Rogan's scalp, apologized to his employees in a statement for "the way The Joe Rogan Experience controversy continues to impact each of you."

According to Daniel Ek, the Spotify team has been left "feeling drained, frustrated and unheard." Yes, following inane and hysterical commentary on Twitter, Instagram, and other social media platforms about the alleged evils of a podcaster who interviews people and listens to their views, then posts the recordings for other people to listen to as they choose, must be wrenching.

To his credit, Ek hasn't canceled Rogan and he backed free speech, although from a defensive crouch. Indeed, his groveling, cant-filled missive is characteristic of such statements by organizations under pressure to suppress unwelcome views. They almost always accept the premises of the cancelers and treat the aggrieved as delicate hot-house plants on the verge of collapse if they don't get their way.

Is it too much, for once,

Rich Lowry

for people in a position of supposed authority to tell the offended to get over it and buck up like adults living in a free society? Ek's statement suggests the answer is still "no."

He assured Spotify employees that he's thinking about "what additional steps we can take to further balance creator expression with user safety." He promised to consult outside experts on this question. He also pledged to devote $100 million, equal to the amount Spotify spent on its licensing agreement for Rogan's podcast, on licensing, developing, and marketing music and audio content from "historically marginalized groups."

"I deeply regret," he reiterated, "that you are carrying so much of this burden."

All in all, it was a performance worthy of a college dean trying to talk down students who may come for him or her next.

What, for instance, does "user safety" mean? Listening to a song or a podcast is not like operating a piece of dangerous heavy machinery. Anyone getting behind the wheel of, say, a mobile hydraulic crane needs absolutely to know what he is doing at imminent risk of causing harm to himself or others. Someone listening to an uncongenial podcast can turn it off and listen to something else or nothing at all, in total safety.

As for "unheard," it is left-wing argot that has seeped into the mainstream. It is a meaningless term in this context. If a coder at Spotify feels unheard, so what? It isn't his or her job to opine on controversies over content. Moreover, all too often those claiming to be metaphorically unheard insist that the only way to get themselves heard is to make someone else literally unheard via cancellation.

The pledge of $100 million for more content is at least a gesture toward the notion that the solution to speech you don't like is more speech. Yet, it reeks of a shakedown and an implicit bargain throwing resources at the would-be cancelers of Joe Rogan so they will go away and try to cancel someone else.

Ek clearly believes that by giving ground, by putting content warnings on some Rogan podcasts and removing others, while making apologetic sounds, he can weather this storm. Maybe. But the fever for cancellations won't end until the likes of Ek are courageous and tough-minded enough to tell the mob and its whiny fellow travelers that offensive speech isn't a threat to anyone's safety or emotional well-being, and that they're done pretending otherwise.

The debate over speech in this country is too often defined by people using their childishness and sense of entitlement as weapons. That won't change until leaders are unafraid to tell them in frank terms to grow up.

With online sales double that of previous year, work-from-home appears to be here to stay

The Markets

Our preferred if sometimes flawed primary stock market indicator, the S&P 500 Stock Index (SPX), looked very much like it was going to have another positive week until Thursday rolled around, and it got hit with a double-whammy. First, James Bullard, the St. Louis Federal Reserve Bank President, and voting member of the Federal Reserve Board (the Fed), said that he was "dramatically" more hawkish on interest rates and wanted to see a full percentage point of interest rate increase by July and is open to an immediate increase without waiting for the next Board meeting.

Then, administration officials called for all U.S. citizens in Ukraine to evacuate immediately because Russia is poised to invade at any time. We have mentioned in the past that there are several things that were on our market risk radar, and on that one day, two of them popped up with big blips.

Nothing has happened yet in either area, but markets operate on anticipated future events, and the probability of unpleasant things happening soon just jumped. The SPX finished the week down 1.82% at 4418.64 but remains up 12.30% from this time last year.

The analysis of where the stock market is ranged from the perennial doomsayers forecasting a crash to others who looked at the impressive earnings reports that have come in so far this year and claim that the market has not been this relatively cheap in two years, and thus is a bargain.

The CRSP Mid-Cap Value Index, our other tracked stock index, rose 0.44% for the week to close at 2540.09, further confirming the rotation from large-cap growth stocks to smaller, value stocks. It remains down 2.2% from its high at the end of last year but appears to be holding up relatively well.

The yield on the benchmark 10-year U.S. Treasury note did indeed jump up above 2% on Thursday, but after spiking midday on Friday, sagged back down to

Market & Economic Update

By Jeffrey W. McClure

about where it was last week at 1.915%, up 0.08% while the Treasury yield curve continued to remain decidedly positive, suggesting good times ahead. The folks in the bond market are not anticipating unreasonably high interest rates anytime soon. The spread between the 10-year T-note rate and the 10-year Inflation-adjusted Treasury rate suggested that the bond mavins expect average annual inflation to average about 2.5% over the next decade. West Texas Intermediate crude oil (WTI) prices slid slowly downward until Friday, when they jumped up to $93.87 per barrel, up 2.1% for the week. The rumor was that if war in Eastern Europe happens, it could choke off oil exports from Russia, creating a shortage and driving up prices.

The Economy

The headline economic news for the week ending on February 11 should have come as no surprise to anyone but that did not keep the pundits from panicking. The Labor Department released its monthly estimate of what happened in the Consumer Price Index (CPI) both for the month and from last year at this time. The headline one-year CPI was up a stunning 7.4%, which, again should be no surprise to anyone who has been to the grocery store or filled up their tank with gasoline. Looking carefully at the components of the Index, it was the usual culprits that were driving the rise, namely used cars and trucks, up 40.5%; motor fuel, up 40%; and meat, poultry, fish, and eggs, up 12.7%.

We remain of the opinion that such increases will not continue at that level over the next year. Used cars and trucks, for example, are extremely unlikely to appreciate another 40% over the next 12 months, and gasoline too is unlikely rise as much in 2022 as it did in 2021. Once, again, the primary source of those price increases other than for fuel, appears to be kinks in the supply chain. We Americans want to buy goods, and we want them now! When high demand hits a limited supply, prices tend to go up. The CPI we see was primarily generated by January's economic demands for goods, but there is growing evidence that consumers are shifting their spending away from goods and back to services. While services prices were up too, the drivers appeared to be the goods involved in providing those services. Presuming we emerge from the pandemic over the remainder of 2022, there is evidence that the supply chains will open up and prices may stabilize. The future is always uncertain, but we are optimistic.

Meanwhile, jobless claims fell for the third straight week and are now down to where they were in 2019 even as hiring surged. E-commerce (online buying and selling) was twice as high in January as it was a year ago. Indications are that work-from-home is here to stay, even after the pandemic fades away. The 2021 trade goods deficit increased 27% last year as our booming economy enabled us to buy a lot of "stuff" from other countries.

In short, the U.S. economy continues to boom, with plenty of fuel to keep growing but that will not insulate market levels from a fear shock if war does break out in Eastern Europe or the Fed jacks interest rates up to an unreasonable level. On that last issue, if the Fed adopts Bullard's "hawkish" position it would bring interest rates and Fed policy only back to where it was before the pandemic, in our view a not-unreasonable place for them to be.

Thoughts on election

To the Editor:

With election time here I wanted to take time to give my thoughts on the elections.

The most important thing is do your home work. If you choose to be a voter at least take the time to really know the candidate that you are selecting. Voting is not a popularity contest. Unfortunately just because the candidate says it, doesn't make it true. They are trying to sell themselves and will tell you what they think you want to hear. That is why I say do your homework.

It is not a sign contest. The size and number of signs is no reason to pick a candidate. It doesn't even mean that the person or business allowing the sign agrees with or supports the candidate. They were asked and said yes to the sign. Maybe placement of signs does show something about the candidate. There are laws about signs that say when and where they can be placed. First, Does the candidate have permission to place the sign at the location. Second, Is the sign on private property or in the right of way. Third who placed the sign at the location. The point is don't use signs to make your choice .

Your Voice

Letters to the Editor

I would also say don't let the letter "I" on the ballot make you choose. The "I" stands for Incumbent. I'm not saying that all incumbents are bad, but I am saying is that just because a candidate is the incumbent does mean they are the best choice. We hear talk of term limits, I believe we have term limits if the voters choose to use their vote to replace someone.

I would say that the most important character to look for in a candidate is their integrity. I have always used this measure in every aspect of my work and personal life, it goes like this, is it legal, is it ethical and is it moral. Try to pick a candidate that obeys the law, try to pick a candidate that shows very high ethics and try to pick a candidate who has very high morals.

Ask yourself this question. What does this candidate do when no one else is watching.

It's not easy. You can be assured that I have not always voted for the right person. Not enough homework on my part I guess.

"If they do a development agreement like the others we have approved, it will be a good development for the Village," he said.

He referred to the agreement which brought in Drakes Landing as being beneficial to both the developer and the Village. "At first, those homes were going to be in the $250,000 range as starter homes, but now they will be in the $400,000 range with two-car garages and golf cart garages," Coggin said. "The builder says that everything he has for the first phase is already sold." When fully developed, Drakes Landing will have 174 single family homes.

Coggin told the group that he sees the role of the Village board as one of protecting the identity of Salado during the surge of growth it is facing.

He said he wants to continue to protect and promote the historic district and historic character of Salado, while protecting and promoting the golf course and other businesses that bring visitors to town.

LOYAL ELDON MILLER
FEB. 10, 1934
FEB. 12, 2022

Loyal Eldon Miller, 88, of Belton passed away on February 12, 2022 at Baylor-Scott and White in Temple.

A memorial service for Mr. Miller will be held on 2 p.m. March 26 at Dossman Funeral Home in Belton with Rev. Andy Davis officiating. He will be cremated.

He was born on February 10, 1934 in Seward, Nebraska to Rev. Loyal Albert and Elise (Sunday) Miller. He married LaNora Glazener in Dallas, Texas. After spending two years in the US Navy, he graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1963 with a BS in Accounting, and became a Certified Public Accountant in 1964. Eldon was employed by Arthur Anderson (a multinational public accounting firm) for 10 years. From there he entered banking with Bank of America (formerly First National Bank of Dallas) where he retired as Senior Vice President. Miller was active in his profession serving on national, state, and local committees.

Eldon and LaNora moved to Salado in 1992. He continued his banking career as an internal auditor for several community banks in the area. He was active in community affairs serving as treasurer for the Village of Salado as well as the Salado Chamber of Commerce and other entities. Eldon was also a mentor for Salado ISD and served on the Mentor Board of Directors.

Miller was a longtime election judge in Precinct 203 for both Bell County and local elections. He joined the Lions Club after moving to Salado and became very active serving in all offices and was elected District Governor in 2001. Eldon was a longtime member of the First Baptist Church in Belton, serving as deacon, Sunday school director, Adult Choir, and was a referee in Upward Basketball.

Dossman Funeral Home in Belton is in charge of the arrangements.

Great Backyard Bird Count set Feb. 18-21; get ready to identify feathered friends

The annual Great Backyard Bird Count will be Feb. 18-21.

Participating is easy, fun to do alone or with others, and can be done anywhere you find birds.

Step 1: Decide where you will watch birds.

Step 2: Watch birds for 15 minutes or more, at least once over the four days, February 18-21, 2022.

Step 3: Count all the birds you see or hear within your planned time/location and use the best tool for sharing your bird sightings:

If you are a beginning bird admirer and new to the count, try using the Merlin Bird ID

app. If you have participated in the count before, try eBird Mobile app or enter your bird list on the eBird website (<https://www.birdcount.org/ebird-on-computer/>).

If you are participating as a group, visit <https://www.birdcount.org/group-counts/> for instructions for Group Counting.

Wild Birds Unlimited is a founding and major sponsor of the Great Backyard Bird Count (GBBC), an annual counting of the birds. For at least 15 minutes on one or more of the count days, simply tally the numbers and kinds of birds you see. Learn how to submit your data at the GBBC website, <https://www.birdcount.org>. It's that easy.

When you feed birds in your backyard and submit data for GBBC, it shows that you value having a daily relationship with nature and that you are willing to take action to foster it. Your information becomes part of an extensive database that is analyzed by scientists to better understand important trends in bird populations, range expansions, habitat changes and shifts in migration patterns.

Participating in GBBC is now more important than ever, because birds need our help. Our partners at the Cornell Lab of Ornithology, in collaboration with other researchers, recently published a study which determined that the skies over North America are home to nearly three billion fewer birds than in 1970. That means almost 1 out of every 4 birds have disappeared from our lives over the past 50 years. You can help by providing data about your bird sightings and by creating habitat in your own backyard which supports birds and other wildlife.

Wild Birds Unlimited has a long history of providing educational information, products and services that directly support local and migratory song bird populations. You can indeed make a difference - in your own backyard. Listen to our Nature Centered podcast and check out the show notes here for more details and specific ways to be a song bird hero by sharing your sightings during GBBC and beyond. Click here for more actions you can take to help #SaveTheSongBirds.

Visit your local Wild Birds Unlimited store for more information and for great products to help you count the birds. Find your local store.

Lady Eagles hold off East View, 12-6

The Salado Eagles opened the 2022 season with a 12-6 road win over East View Lady Patriots.

Most of the damage was done by the Eagles in the top of the third inning when they were able to plate eight runs, as they sent 12 batters to the plate to blow open a close 1-1 game.

Lexi Dudeczka led off the third by reaching on a hit by pitch. Ryley Litchfield walked and Katey Bartek walked to load the bases. Bri Waters collected an RBI with a single to center field. Pazlee Conrad was hit by a pitch for an RBI. Brooklyn Williamson cleared the bases with a three-run double.

Giselle Salazar walked and a wild pitch moved Williamson to third base during her at-bat. Salazar stole second and Williamson came home to score on the attempt. Salazar scored on a single off the bat of Angel Van de Plas. Litchfield brought Van de Plas home on a two-out single.

With two outs in the top of the seventh, Bartek singled. Waters followed with her fourth hit of the night, a two-run homerun. This gave Water a natural cycle, hitting a single, double, triple and homer in order.

East View scored five runs in the bottom of the seventh inning with four of them on a Grand Slam.

Waters 4-5, 3 RBI; Van de Plas 2-3, 2 RBI; Litchfield 2-4, 1 RBI. Also getting hits were Dudeczka, Bartek, Conrad, and Williamson

The Junior Varsity Lady Eagles were able to hold off a scrappy Lady Patriot team 7-6. The girls were led by the solid pitching and catching of Krystle Vazquez and catcher Brooke Bailey. Key plays were made by Izzy Dudeczka at second and Kaylyn Houston at short stop.

Offensively the big hits came from Kirbee Webb and Allison Alcoser who managed to have multiple hits and RBI on the night.

Opening lead — king of diamonds.

Here is a hand that demonstrates the type of thought process that is necessary to become a successful player. West's opening lead against four hearts is the king of diamonds, on which East plays the deuce and South the queen. West's first problem is what to play next.

If West thoughtlessly continues with a diamond, declarer ruffs and plays three rounds of trump, securing the contract as the cards lie since the defense cannot cash their two spade tricks. But if West is fully alert, he realizes that South's queen of diamonds is sure to be a singleton because East would not play the deuce of diamonds with any holding other than the 10-9-2. Accordingly, West shifts to the ace of spades, on which East plays the nine to ask for a continuation. But West can't oblige and reverts to diamonds.

Declarer ruffs and plays the A-K of trump. If West is asleep at the switch, he follows low to both trumps, and South easily makes the contract by leading another trump.

But if West is thinking along the proper lines, he does not follow low twice to the A-K. West realizes that declarer will surely make the contract if left to his own devices, so on the second trump, West plays the queen, hoping East started with the J-x-x.

Once West rids himself of the queen, it doesn't matter whether declarer next plays another trump or tries to run dummy's clubs; in either case he goes down one, losing two spades, a heart and a diamond.

Second round launched for Accelerated EMT class in Austin

Acadian Ambulance and the National EMS Academy are at it again, kicking off their second round of the accelerated EMT class in Austin. The program will select individuals interested in earning their Emergency Medical Technician certification and pay them while they are in training. Upon successful completion, they will then serve as EMTs in the Austin area.

Compared to the traditional EMT program, which takes four months to complete, the accelerated program is an intense and complex seven-week course. Acceptance into this program is competitive, with only 20 seats available. Acadian will cover the fees and costs of the course. Upon graduation and passing the EMT National Registry exam, the individual will begin earning EMT pay and will work as an Acadian EMT in the Austin area.

The last day to apply for the program is March 14, and the course will begin in April. The class will be held in the Austin area.

To learn more about the program or to apply, visit <https://nationalemssacademy.com/programs/accelerated-emt-program-austin/>.

“Since we launched the first accelerated EMT program in Austin, we’ve had numerous students participate in the program,” said National EMS Academy Director Taylor Richard. “These new EMTs are already proving to be invaluable to supporting our staffing.”

Acadian Ambulance provides emergency and non-emergency medical transportation to 35 Texas counties and the Dallas, Houston, Austin and San Antonio metro areas.

What to do if you're behind on your mortgage payments

Although the pandemic has impacted the financial lives of millions, one of its largest effects has been on individuals' housing situations. Since the onset of the pandemic, Americans have missed a combined $83.9 billion in mortgage payments, according to the Mortgage Bankers Association, creating undue stress and anxiety about their futures.

“Even as governments across the country begin to lift lingering pandemic restrictions, the effects on housing instability remain a critical issue for millions of homeowners,” said Michael Sullivan, a personal financial consultant with Take Charge America, a nonprofit credit and housing counseling agency. “If you’ve fallen behind on your mortgage — or soon will — there are several steps you should take to protect yourself and improve the chances of staying in your home.”

If you're behind on your housing payments or struggling, Sullivan suggests the following actions:

- Contact your lender. Don't wait to call your lender until you have missed a payment. Be up front and honest about your situation, asking about potential programs or options they may have available, such as mortgage forbearance or loan modification. The sooner you contact your lender, the more options you'll likely have available.
- Research housing assistance programs. Nonprofits and government agencies at both national and local levels support individuals struggling with mortgage payments. Homeowners can check out the Fannie Mae website to find information and possible resources for assistance.
- Consider a refinance. Exploring a refinance on your mortgage could potentially make your payment more affordable either through a lower interest rate or extending the timeline to pay off your balance.
- Seek legal help. Depending on the severity of your situation, you may want to find legal assistance to act on your behalf with your lender and negotiate any potential agreement to resolve the issue.

• Get it in writing. Document all your communication with your lenders, banks or servicers. You'll also want to request any agreements you come to with them in writing. Properly documenting everything will help you if a dispute arises.

• Seek nonprofit housing counseling. If your situation is overwhelming, nonprofit housing counseling agencies, like Take Charge America, can provide you with one-on-one guidance and tailored resources to help you determine the best path forward.

Founded in 1987, Take Charge America, Inc. is a nonprofit agency offering financial education and counseling services including credit counseling, debt management, student loan counseling, housing counseling and bankruptcy counseling. It has helped more than 2 million consumers nationwide. Visit takechargeamerica.org or call (888) 822-9193.
